CRUSH IN THE RAIN AT GOULD WEDDING

Mob of Women Forced Back at Marriage of Marjorie Gould and A. J. Drexel, Jr.

CARED NOT FOR A WETTING

Stood for Hours Under Umbrellas Watching Carriage Procession—3,000 in St. Bartholomew's at Ceremony.

Surrounded by policemen, who had to fight back a mob of women from his automobile, despite a heavy rainstorm, George Jay Gould escorted his eldest daughter, Marjorie Gwynne, yesterday afternoon into St. Bartholomew's Church at Madison Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, where she was married to Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel of Philadelphia and London, in the presence of some 3,000 invited guests.

Mr. Gould was not perturbed by the press of the curious, who wanted to get a look at the bride and didn't seem to mind in the least getting wet for the chance of seeing her. These literally blocked Forty-fourth Street. As his car with its escort of policemen appeared some one cried out, "There's the bride," and from all sides umbrella holders rushed toward it. The chauffeur had to bring the motor to a standstill just as he was about to turn south into Madison Avenue to get to the church door, for fear of running over some of the curious.

The mounted policemen were instantly reinforced by some of the other traffic men on foot, and the crowd was pushed back. Not only was it composed of women, but these were hampered in their movements by their umbrellas. They streamed back toward the machine through the police line after their first encounter, but after a moment the police rallied, drove them back, and the automobile was slowly manoeuvred down to the church door.

Crowds Assembled in Sunshine.

The crowds began to gather near the church early in the afternoon when the sun was shining. Some two hours later, when one of the heaviest of the Spring showers began flooding down, the police thought their way would be made easier. They were mistaken; the downpour sent a few of the onlookers home, but it made the thousand or more who remained all the more unmanageable. They could move about with difficulty under a forest of umbrellas.

About noon there was a funeral in the chapel of the church. Some of the earlier women—practically the whole of the street crowd was of women—went into the chapel, trusting to find some way of getting into the main church. The coffin had hardly been borne out when some of them drifted through the door connecting the chapel and the church.

This was all decorated with lilies and pink roses for the wedding. The invaders went about picking a flower here and a sprig of green there as mementoes of the occasion. The ushers and their assistants did all they could to repel the invaders, but they needed the police before they accomplished the clearing out of the church.

Then the onlookers sought the best stands they could find in the streets. Madison Avenue, from Forty-third to Forty-fifth Street, was lined with women hungrily looking for the coming of the carriages and the automobiles containing the bridal party. Inspectors Walsh and Boettler had charge of a lot of police reserves, whose business it was, not only to keep the streets open for the carriages and automobiles, but also for the continuous stream of Madison Avenue cars.

Braved the Rain to See Carriages.

When the heavens opened about 3:30 o'clock the thick forest of umbrellas sprang into sight. Such women as were scantily protected ran to get in doorways, but only a few went home. The blowing rain made their umbrellas useful only to protect their hats; their clothing from the shoulders down was drenched long before the bride arrived with her father.

Most of the street crowd couldn't see anything except the outsides of passing vehicles, but the crowd stayed on. From the high stoops of the few adjacent old-style brownstone houses, which they seized, they craned their necks at every automobile or carriage on the inside of which they could see any flash of a white dress.

"There she is!" some alarmist would call out, and the forest of umbrellas would swoop forward into the flooded street. The police would rush them back in disorder, and they would seize what points of vantage they could gain, until some one else called out that it was a false alarm.

Meanwhile the heavy rain was wetting them through and through.

Then came Mrs. Gould with the bridesmaids. Some of the nearest could see dresses inside the windows that told of the bridal party. The umbrellas, encumbering their owners, moved in a wild tragle toward the vehicle, but too late.

Rush Upon the Bride.

Finally, at 4 o'clock, Mr. Gould arrived with the bride. She was seen.

"There she is," went up the cry, and this time there was almost a mobbing. The umbrellas fairly fell upon the automobile. The police rushed the hungry-eyed crowd, but it streamed between the blue ranks and back upon the automobile. Mr. Gould smiled reassuringly at his daughter. The police succeeded in opening enough of a roadway for the machine to get to the church, and the bride slipped out and into the vestibule.

Out of every hundred women in the streets perhaps ninety-five succeeded in seeing the outside of innumerable carriages and automobiles, experienced the thrills of thinking they were about to see the hem of a bridesmaid's dress, were jostled around, wet through, and went home happy. Most of the street attendance on the wedding was of middle-aged women, a preponderance of whom were portly.

When word spread that the bride had gone into the church, and the rain continued to fall in torrents, some more of the street attendance went home. But half a hundred waited on through it all to see the bride come out again.

The tangle of vehicles, street cars, and people was so inextricable that it was long after 6 o'clock before the church was emptied. When it was all over, a perspiring, water-sogged traffic policeman said:

MRS. J. H. SMITH TO WED.

"Silent" Smith's Widow Engaged to Bartow W. Van Voorhis.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 19.—On excellent authority it is learned that a marriage has been arranged and will shortly take place between Mrs. James Henry Smith and Bartow Van Voorhis. The matter is being kept very quiet. In fact, the present intention is to defer announcement of the engagement until after the wedding ceremony, and under the circumstances this report may possibly be denied.

Mrs. Smith is at present in Paris, while Van Voorhis is in London, stopping at A. J. Drexel's house in Grosvenor Square.

Mrs. James Henry Smith was born Annie Armstrong, the daughter of Gen. John A. Armstrong of Baltimore. Her sister is Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel of Philadelphia. Her marriage to William Rhinelander Stewart, son of Lispenard Stewart, in the Spring of 1879 was one of the leading events of the social season in Baltimore. Mr. Stewart was the heir to the great Rhinelander estate.

James Henry Smith, who was known as "Silent Jim" Smith and "The Man of Mystery," made his first appearance in New York society under the tutelage of Mrs. Stewart in 1901, when he gave a valentine party at Sherry's, at which Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., received with him. Not much had been heard of Mr. Smith before that, but on the death in 1899 of his uncle, George Smith, who had amassed $50,000,000 or $60,000,000 in Western railroads, "Silent" Smith came into possession of the greater part of this fortune. He married Mrs. Stewart in Scotland in 1906, after she had divorced her first husband. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were on a yachting trip around the world together when Mr. Smith died in Kioto, Japan, on March 26, 1907.

The will of Mr. Smith left $3,000,000 to his widow, a life interest in $1,000,000 to his sister, Lady Mary Smith Cooper, wife of Sir George Cooper, co-heir of George Smith; a life interest in $500,000 to Anita Stewart, his step-daughter; $12,500,000 to George Grant Smith, and $6,270,000 to William Smith Mason, nephews, and $100,000 each to the Orthopaedic and St. Luke's Hospitals.

Anita Stewart, "Silent Jim's" step-daughter, was married last Summer, with royal pomp, to Prince Miguel of Braganza, a pretender to the throne of Spain. She received, it was reported, a large dowry from her mother.

Bartow W. Van Voorhis is a member of the Union Club and the New York Yacht Club. At these clubs last night it was said that he seldom appeared, and little could be learned about him. It was stated that Mr. Van Voorhis has spent most of his time in recent years abroad. His address is given as the Union Club.

FAKE REMBRANDTS HERE.

Rochefort Pictures in $160,000 Collection of "1830 School" Are Forgeries.

PARIS, April 19.—Henri Rochefort, editor of the Patrie, who is an authority on paintings, writing of "Comte d'Aulby de Gatigny," charged by Mrs. Charles Hamilton Paine with having sold spurious pictures to her husband and herself, and on the subject of paintings generally, warns Americans against buying paintings from pretended ancient but impoverished families, declaring that the chances are a thousand to one that the pictures were manufactured in Montmartre.

"Recently," writes M. Rochefort, "a too confiding Yankee invited me to admire a collection of pictures of the '1830 School,' which cost him $160,000, of which not a single one was authentic. Only, as he did not prosecute the persons from whom he purchased the pictures, the matter remained practically a secret. But we cannot be too careful in warning our American friends against noblemen who offer to sacrifice their precious heirlooms in favor of the purchaser. There are a thousand chances to one that the Velasquez, the Rubens, or the Fragonard they offer the American buyer has been manufactured in some studio in the Buttes Montmartre.

"In the United States alone there are 2,500 Rembrandts, of which certainly more than 2,000 are absolute forgeries."

M. Rochefort, referring to the past life of d'Aulby, says that he met "Prince Lusignan," for whom, it is said, d'Aulby was first the masseur and then his successor, at the home of Victor Hugo. Lusignan was a tailor, but assumed the title of Prince and posed as the pretender to the throne of Jerusalem. He was received in high society and distributed decorations lavishly, and even offered to Victor Hugo the "Cordon of Melusino," a legendary fairy protecting the house of Lusignan, but Hugo declined the honor.

A further lot of pictures belonging to the so-called Comte d'Aulby came into the hands of the authorities to-day, when, by order of the examining Magistrate at Tours, paintings at the d'Aulby château, signed by Teniers, Largillière, Hamilton, Van der Weyden, and other noted artists were seized. It is asserted that d'Aulby admitted that these paintings were copies.

In the course of d'Aulby's examination to-day he declared before the Magistrate that his real name was plain Daulby. He said he was born in London, and that his father was a painter. He added that he was a naturalized Italian, and stated that he received the pictures from his uncle.

The Matin to-day asserts that d'Aulby had business relations with a prominent art dealer of Boston. The paper adds that the "Count" employed talented young artists to copy masterpieces in the art museums of Europe, and that these copies were subsequently installed in his château at St. Cyrsur Loire.

D. & H. MEN FOR A STRIKE.

Leaders in Five Brotherhoods Take Charge at Albany.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 19.—There arrived in Albany to-day grand officers of the five brotherhoods of railroad men, whose members on the Delaware & Hudson system are voting on the question of whether to strike should their final demands be denied. Those officers are L. E. Shepherd, assistant to the President of the Order of Railway Conductors; Vice President Sines of the Brotherhood of Trainmen; M. W. Cadle, Assistant Grand Chief of the Brotherhood of Railway Engineers; C. A. Wilson, Assistant Grand Chief of the Brotherhood of Railway Firemen, and T. M. Pierson, Vice President of the Brotherhood of Railway Telegraphers.

The strike vote of the engineers, firemen, and telegraphers is now being counted here, and, while the result will not be announced for a day or two, it was said by one of the grand officers that it will be unanimous in favor of a strike if necessary.

FOOD PRICES FALLING AND BREAD CHEAPER

Wheat, Corn, Cotton, and Materials in Market Standards Lead Expected Decline.

ALL DOWN EXCEPT MEAT

East Side Bakers Making Bigger Loaves, Saving Customers $5,000 a Day—Top Prices Reached in January.

Wheat, corn, cotton, some of the metals, and those of the other commodities which lend themselves to speculation have been declining for the past few weeks, some of them sharply, and the poor consumer, who has seen the cost of living go up steadily since the panic period, is beginning to hope that the crest of high prices has been reached and that most of the necessities of life may get back again to something like real values.

Flour Steadily Declining.

There are indications that the backward slide has begun. Flour has gone down 25 cents a barrel since January, and $1.10 since its highest price of last year, and east side bakers have increased the size of their loaves. Consumers are now getting two pounds two ounces, and in some cases two pounds three ounces of bread for 7 cents. A short time ago they got only two pounds for the same money. This results in the saving of thousands of dollars to the poor.

"We have increased the weight of loaves as much as we can," said Jacob Bock of 159 East Houston Street, President of the Boss Bakers' Association yesterday.

It is estimated that the increased weight in the loaves will make a difference of $5,000 a day to east side consumers.

Everything Down Except Meat.

Other marked declines in the prices of foodstuffs are bound to make themselves felt in the retail markets and in the household expense accounts. Potatoes, for instance, are off from 40 to 50 per cent. from the price of last November, and while they do not enter into the speculative markets, a drop of that extent cannot be passed over by the middlemen and retailers. It means cheaper potatoes at the corner grocery.

Butter, as every housewife knows, has been selling below the sky-high prices of last year for some time, and is now on the average 6 per cent. lower in the Western wholesale markets, but meats stubbornly hold out. Beef in Chicago is still about at its high price of $19.25 per 100 pounds, reached on March 28, and pork is only a trifle lower, and lamb and mutton also refuse to come down.

Taking a list of fourteen commodities, such as wheat, corn, oats, beef, pork, sugar, and the standard metals, it would seem that the top prices were hit in January. A number of commodities reached prices then which they have never since returned to, although the falling off has been by no means constant.

These market prices, although influenced by speculation, unusually indicate the true level of values in the long run.

Of the commodities chosen it will be seen that they reached their lowest point for the year in April, and that none have reached new high levels since March, when four of the group made high record prices. Nine of these fourteen were dearest in January.

These standard commodities are set forth in the appended table, which gives the high and low prices, highest and lowest prices reached this year, together with the lowest prices in 1909. The prices are in the cash markets in New York:

Another test, which is perhaps broader, is obtainable from the price of standard foodstuffs, materials, and manufactured articles quoted regularly in the trade journals. The prices of commodities in the vicinity of New York as reported by Dun's Review make possible an estimate of the upward movement of the past year and the beginnings of the present decline. The figures in the appended table cover the first of this month, the last of January, when the upward movement seems to have reached the top, and the same period a year ago. The prices given are wholesale quotations, and not by any means close to the heights to which the New York consumer was forced to climb to fill his wants over the counter.

Benefits Taken by Farmers.

When the rise was in full swing last year an investigation by the Washington authorities put the blame on the middlemen, but the farmer himself has taken most of the profit from the higher cost of living.

Last year was the greatest money-making twelve months that the farmers of this country ever experienced. The total value of the farm products which enter into the Department of Agriculture's calculations was put by the Secretary at $8,760,000,000, against $7,848,000,000 in 1908, and this increase of nearly $1,000,000,000 was due to shrinking prices rather than to greater production. In fact, all crops for which the farm value per bushel or other unit is reported by the Government showed greater advances in prices than all of the other commodities.

Since the beginning of the upward movement in the nineties, corn, at last year's farm value, figured by the Department of Agriculture, had more than doubled in price, and so had oats. Potatoes had nearly doubled, wheat had increased two-thirds, and rye, buckwheat, and tobacco by three-fifths.

Taking all of the farm products together, the average advance was 87 per cent. when last year's figures were made up, and prices were still on the rise.

ABRAHAM WHITE ACCUSED OF LARCENY

Known as "Postage Stamp Capitalist" Since He Got $1,500,000 Bonds on a 2-Cent Risk.

BID HERE FOR $40,000,000

"Investor" Says White Kept $600 That Should Have Gone Into an "Extra Opportunity" Offered.

Abraham White, who achieved fame in Wall Street fifteen years ago by bidding for and getting a $1,500,000 slice of the Cleveland bond issue with no more capital than the postage which carried his bids and who has since been chiefly known as an alluring bidder for the business of out-of-town investors, who want to get rich in a hurry, was arrested last night on a charge of larceny.

The offense, for which Detectives McConville and Nelson, acting for the District Attorney, picked him up, is technically "larceny as bailee," but in plain English he is charged by one of his past customers with having appropriated to his own use a six-hundred-dollar investment.

It is of interest that the money which White is now charged with misappropriating was intrusted to him back in 1907, when he was living in splendor at Shadow Lawn, the one-time McCall house on the Jersey Coast. It was just about then too, that White became a bidder for the $40,000,000 of bonds which New York City was about to put out, giving as a deposit a draft for $800,000, representing the 2 per cent. required by the Controller, drawn on his own Greater New York Security Company, an institution which the Controller did not see fit to recognize as responsible.

'How I Made a Million."

White described himself at headquarters as a broker and gave his address as the Hotel Manhattan. The complaint, which is sworn to by Isaac V. Zane, a retired engineer of Whitehaven, Penn., charges that White failed to make any returns on and appropriated to his own use $600, given him for investment on Jan. 16, 1907.

White was admitted to $3,000 bail by Magistrate Herbert in the Night Court, N. Lievon putting up a house at 184 Chrystie Street as security. Zane's story, according to the police, is that he was moved to consult White about investment, through a newspaper story purporting to have been written by White himself entitled "How I Made a Million." He received a reply signed by White as President of the Greater New York Securities Company of 100 Broadway in February, 1907. This letter apologized for the delay and explained that it was because of the writer's carefulness. He had just learned of an "extra opportunity," he said, and promised Zane that if he would let him have the money that he had out at interest he would make an investment that would pay.

"At least I'll protect the principal and see that you don't lose," he added.

Zane, according to the detectives, sent White $100 and a draft on the Bank of Savings for $500 more, the receipts of which, they say, White acknowledged in a letter of Jan. 23, 1907, in which he inclosed Zane's bankbook, showing the withdrawal of the money.

On Nov. 7, 1907, according to the police, Zane received another letter from White, dated at St. Louis, in which the writer regretted that the investment had not turned out as well as he had hoped, but thought that he could invest the money to better advantage if Zane would leave it with him a while longer. Meanwhile, he inclosed $25 as a partial return on the investment.

Waited Until Now for Returns.

Zane says this was the only return he ever received, and that subsequent efforts on his part to communicate with White were unavailing. He did not complain until March 10 of this year.

Detective McConville says he haunted White's office at 52 Broadway, where he did business as the Abraham White Bonding Company, but could find no trace of White. Then unexpectedly he recognized him on Broadway yesterday.

At the Night Court White said that he didn't remember any such transaction as that told of by Zane. He thought that the Greater New York Security Company might have been importuned by Zane and that he might then have had an interview with him about investments. He thought he dimly remembered that Zane had told him about having friends in a fraternal order who wished to invest in Wall Street, and that he advised him to leave the Street alone.

"It is not likely," he said, "that I would run away with a paltry $600, or $600,000, for that matter. Why, I have had as much as $300,000 from Russell Sage without any security whatever, and since his death I have done business with the Sage estate and with Charles W. Osborne as trustee."

Sage Financed Cleveland Deal.

The money from Russell Sage which Mr. White referred to in the police court last night may have been the funds which Russell Sage supplied to take up the $1,500,000 bonds bid for successfully by Abraham White in 1896.

Secretary Carlisle had not required deposits to accompany bids when these bonds were put out, and White, who had been in Wall Street long enough to get a pretty good line on what the bankers were bidding, made a series of guesses covering $7,000,000 of the bonds, and Wall Street woke up when the awards were announced to discover that an unknown had been awarded $1,500,000 of the securities. It was the first time that any one had taken advantage of the fact that no security or deposit was required as evidence of good faith, and White became famous.

The bonds immediateely went well above the prices at which they were awarded, and White had no difficulty in getting Russell Sage to put up money on a contract, in which the Government was the only party bound. White was said to have made close to $100,000 on the transaction.

Since then White has been chiefly in the limelight as the promoter of wireless enterprises, whose advertisements were conspicuous for glowing promises, even in the palmy days of the Cobalt and Goldfield mining booms, when the Post Office Department had not yet undertaken to keep advertisers approximately to the realm of facts.

About the time he bought Shadow Lawn on a heavy mortgage he had just promoted the United Wireless Company, which he advertised as a combination of the De Forest Companies and the Marconi.

Although ex-Gov. Griggs of New Jersey, President of the Marconi Company, denied that it was in any way connected with the deal, and Marconi also cabled denials from Italy, White kept right on selling United Wireless stock and announcing that the two systems would be merged. His wireless stock at one time sold up to $7.50 a share, and now occasionally sells for a few cents.

RUBBER BOOM NOW IS AT ITS CLIMAX

300 COMPANIES IN LONDON

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 19.—Rubber to-day rose to the record figure of 12s. 10d. per pound. Two years ago the price was 2s. 9d. a pound.

There are now in existence nearly 300 rubber plantation companies, most of them of recent origin, and the number increases daily. The rubber mania is now believed to have reached its climax. Yesterday eight new companies asked for subscriptions, the total capital asked for being $4,775,000. The banks taking in subscriptions were rushed by mobs of men, women, and even children. Brokers, clerks, commissionaires, messenger boys, and street porters fought their way to the counters to throw in their applications for shares. In a few minutes the two chief companies were oversubscribed, and a little later in the day there were dealings in these lottery tickets at 500 and 600 per cent. premium. Two-shilling shares were run after at 14s. and 15s., while for £1 shares as much as £7 was cheerfully paid, or rather promised, for all these transactions are done for special settlement, in other words, on long credit. No money may have to be put up for several months, and in the interval prices are expected to double or treble themselves.

An equally mad outburst is the rubber gambling on the Stock Exchange itself. It is quite evident that the rubber boom has reached its "South Sea stage."

W. R. Lawson, in the course of an article which The Daily Mail will publish to-morrow, says that all bounds of reason and safety have been passed and the only reason why the collapse holds off is that a large proportion of the dealing has been done on the deferred payment plan. It is estimated that the contingent liabilities of new rubber companies last week were not less than twenty millions sterling. Since then at least two millions more have been added by the new issues of the past few days. When special settlements are coming along rapidly and fancy premiums have to be paid in hard cash, the trouble will begin.

Many sensational stories are afloat about impending revelations at special settlements. One comparatively small broker lost himself altogether in the multitude of his dealings. It is said that for the "special" he asked a friend to look through his books and tell him how he stood. The result of the inquiry was rather startling, for he was liable to take up new shares to the amount of fully a million sterling. It is quite common to have 60,000 or 70,000 shares open for the special.

It is not the shares themselves that are in danger, but the absurd premiums that have been piled up on them. One company was so vigorously boosted that its original capital of £20,000 shot up to £70,000 before it was a week old. The shares appreciated about £20,000 while the prospectus was being printed, and they were £80,000 higher on the day of issue than they had been when turned over by the vendors to the company. It does not follow, however, that the vendors lost that £80,000. It is quite as likely that they made twice or three times as much by their apparent self-denial.

Mr. Lawson asks how the collapse is most likely to come. The rubber boomers flatter themselves that they are quite safe as long as rubber commands its present abnormal price, but that is only one of the risks they have to consider. From a purely financial point of view such wild speculation as this must be suicidal, no matter how profitable the subject may be on which it is based.

Even if 12-shilling rubber were guaranteed for five years ahead, the boom could not be carried on for half or a quarter of that time, simply because it could not be financed. There are too many wild men in it, too many small gamblers, and, worst of all, too many West End plungers.

It is said that smart clubs in Piccadilly and Pall Mall have underwritten new issues so eagerly that they took everything offered to them. They will inevitably be landed with thousands of shares when Capel Court and Mincing Lane have no further use for them.

A second specific danger is the risk of a money squeeze in the Autumn. "If Mr. Lloyd-George remains till then at the head of our unfortunate Exchequer," concludes Mr. Lawson, "and if Mr. Pierpont Morgan gets tired of shouldering Wall Street, there may be an Autumn crisis quite beyond any recent experience. A bad break in Wall Street would, as usual, be immediately followed by a slump in American motor cars, and probably also in diamonds. Every American is a millionaire on the installment plan. When things go wrong with him and he cannot keep up his installments, down goes his automobile and away go his wife's diamonds. There is no more demand for new machines, and last year's output of 300,000 may suddenly drop to 10,000. The most potent cause of the existing famine prices of rubber is undoubtedly the enormous American consumption, chiefly for motor cars. When that slackens, there will be no more famine, and a swing back from 12s. 6d. to 2s. 0d. per pound would be only a repetition of the American experience of two years ago."

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., April 19.—Halley's comet was visible here early to-day in the southeastern horizon.

Its light was brilliant and coruscant.

PARIS, April 19.—Halley's comet was sighted yesterday by the Paris Observatory.

The officials of the observatory say that the comet seems to have a considerably enlarged tail, which, being perpendicular to the earth, impedes observation of the body.

ROME, April 19.—The local authorities in several of the provinces, especially in the South and the islands, have notified the Government that the people are showing great anxiety regarding Halley's comet.

The Government in response has instructed the authorities to adopt some means to reassure the people, all scientists agreeing that there is no danger to be feared from the comet.

DIES ON SEA SURGEON'S TABLE

Little Girl Succumbs to an Operation on Her Throat.

Johannes Burst, the 7-year-old daughter of a steerage passenger on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie from Bremen, died yesterday while undergoing an operation for trachaeotomy, while the liner was on her way up the harbor from Sandy Hook to Quarantine.

The child was in good health until Monday morning, when throat trouble developed and Dr. Fischer, the ship's surgeon, diagnosed it as an abscess on the larynx. Later in the day oedema developed, and spasmodic closing of the throat.

It was hoped that the liner would arrive at her pier in time for the little girl to be taken to a hospital for the operation, but early yesterday it was seen that it would have to be done at once, and the mother took the child to Dr. Fischer, who operated on it with the assistance of Dr. Hiltman. The little patient was in a state of coma at the time, and never regained consciousness.

SEAS BATTERING COTTAGES.

Fine Homes at Point Pleasant, N. J., in Danger of Being Swept Away.

POINT PLEASANT, N. J., April 19.—Battling desperately against the onrush of the tide before a stiff northeast gale Road Commissioner L. D. Van Note of Point Pleasant and a large force of men are endeavoring to save the ocean front cottage of Dr. John Taylor and the Murphy home from being swept away. The sea to-day undermined and carried away the porches of the fine Summer homes, and it is feared that if the tide is high to-morrow morning the cottages themselves will be swept out to sea.

When breaches first appeared in the bulkheading Commissioner Van Note and his street repairing squad, reinforced by many willing citizens, attempted temporarily to stop the breaks by filling them with bags of sand. The next tide undid their work, sweeping the bags and hundreds of tons of sand away.

WALKING GOOD, SAYS GAYNOR.

And Vetoes an Appropriation for a Coroner's Auto in Richmond.

Mayor Gaynor sent to the Aldermen yesetrday his veto of a resolution adopted by them last week giving $1,800 to the Coroner on Staten Island for the purchase of an automobile, in which he advised that official to walk. The Mayor said:

"The Coroner of Richmond does not need an automobile any more than the Mayor does. It would be a luxury. The transportation facilities are adequate in Richmond County, and I can say also from actual experience that the walking there is fine."

The Mayor also vetoed several resolutions granting permits to various societies and institutions to drive advertising wagons in the streets, saying:

"Let them advertise in the newspapers."

HAS JOB FOR ROOSEVELT.

Kissel Would Have Him Investigate Legislature—W. R. Hearst, Too.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 19.—Senator John Kissel of Brooklyn has ideas of his own about the personnel of a commission to investigate alleged legislative corruption.

He introduced a bill to-day creating a commission to be composed of Theodore Roosevelt, Charles E. Hughes, Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., David B. Hill, William F. Sheahan, and William Randolph Hearst to investigate and report to the Legislature on or before Feb. 1, 1911. Each Commissioner, not a State officer, is to receive $100 a day when investigating and expenses, for which an appropriation of $100,000 is provided.

The bill went to the Senate Finance Committee.

GOOD TIMES TO CONTINUE.

President Lovett Says Present Crops Forecast Continuance of Prosperity.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Robert S. Lovett, President of the Union Pacific & Southern Pacific Railroads, returned yesterday from a six weeks' inspection trip over the Harriman system.

Judge Lovett traveled over 15,000 miles and inspected every mile of track in this country and in Old Mexico.

"The business outlook through the West is splendid," said he. "I think the crops will be good generally, and will cause a continuation of the good times we are now enjoying."

PRINCESS'S PEACE OFFERING.

Louise of Belgium Fails to Placate Her Sisters.

BRUSSELS, April 19.—The jewels of the late Queen Marie Henriette, which were held by the creditors of Princess Louise, have finally been given up to her, the debts of the Princess having been settled out of the estate of the late King Leopold.

Princess Louise immediately offered the famous diadem to her sisters if they would resume friendly relations. Both refused, however, unless she would break with Count Mattachich.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, April 19.—Monroe County registered its verdict on political bossism to-day. George W. Aldridge, dictator of its government for twenty years, who dared to put his personality before the voters in a race for Congress, was crushed under a plurality of 5,831 despite open and shameless purchase of votes. James S. Havens, Democrat and anti-boss candidate, will occupy the seat in the House made vacant by the death of James Breck Perkins.

The political overturn accomplished by Havens was almost as great as that in which Eugene N. Foss was elected as a Democrat in the Fourteenth Massachusetts District. The district—the Thirty-second—was carried by Perkins in 1908 by 10,167 plurality, and so a total change of almost 16,000 votes is shown.

How the Majority was Made.

In the City of Rochester, which gave Perkins 6,195 plurality last time, Havens got 3,746 plurality. Aldridge carried only five of the twenty-two wards. In the county outside, which gave Perkins 3,972, Havens got a plurality of 2,085. Out of nineteen towns, not one of which was found out of the Republican column for either the Presidential, Gubernatorial, or Congressional candidate in 1908, Aldridge carried only three—one by thirty-one votes and two by three votes each.

An analysis of the result in the City of Rochester and in the nineteen towns outside tells a story of reasserted political independence that transcends in importance any consideration of the candidates themselves or their efforts in the campaign. An examination of Aldridge's votes in wards he carried shows that the election districts which contributed his localized majorities were without exception those in which the slum element was strongest. Some were called Democratic—they were "Aldridge Democrats"—and were openly known to be strongholds of the worst elements in the Republican machine.

His own ward, normally Republican by 300 to 400 votes, Aldridge carried by only 188 votes. Every ward where thrifty workingmen predominate, every ward where the prosperous business men of Rochester have their homes, joined in the repudiation of the boss. To this story written by the people of the city like chapters were added by the farmers of Monroe County.

Havens Lines Up with Hughes.

The calmest man in the city over the result is the little fighter who has been the centre of the whole conflict. Mr. Havens is telling his friends what he has repeated time and again during the campaign, that he has won as the leader in a great popular movement for decency and the orderly conduct of administrative and legislative affairs. He isn't looking for the Democratic nomination for Governor next Fall, although the Aldridge henchmen last night started a story that he would abandon his Congressional seat after the close of this session and leave the citizens of Rochester to hold another special election or remain unrepresented during the short session next Winter. It can be said that he hasn't any idea of that sort in his mind.

In a personal talk after his election was certain to-night Mr. Havens said to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent:

"I shall take my seat in the House of Representatives feeling that I am simply one of many co-workers in a common cause of good government. All through this campaign it has been of the greatest help to me to think that while they call me a Democrat, men like Gov. Hughes are just as much Democrats as I am on the real purposes of the struggle in which we are engaged. Mr. Foss used to call himself a Republican; now he is a Democrat. It isn't the party label that counts in such a time as this; it is the essential purpose with which public service is offered and given. In the House I shall be quite as glad to work with the Republican insurgents in their fight against the forces of reaction as I shall to lend my aid to my own party when their efforts are directed to the same end."

Mr. Havens gave out a formal statement in which he said:

This is not wholly a partisan victory. In a larger sense it is the victory of the free people of Rochester and Monroe County over a bi-partisan organization and its boss. The Democrats of Monroe County were united in support of the cause I stood for to an extent that was very gratifying to all, and with them were the great mass of Republicans of this county who longed for better politics.

The campaign was made on a high plane, and our appeal was made to the judgment of the people of this county over the heads of the organization which opposed us, and the people saw clearly and acted quickly, as they always do.

While this may be justly heralded as a great Democratic victory, it was no less a victory such as the progressive Republicans have been winning both in the East and in the West. It is a victory over the things for which Cannon has stood and for the ideals which Gov. Hughes typifies.

The result of the vote in the city wards shows that the revolt of the men who most feel the high prices of necessaries against the Payne-Aldrich Tariff bill has not been exaggerated. The people of this county, I feel certain, demand an honest and a reasonable revision of the tariff schedule in the interest of the consumer, and not in favor of special interests."

I believe that this victory means that political bosses belong to the past—their place is in political history, not in the politics of the future. This county is free to-night for the first time in twenty years from the dictation of any political leader."

Aldridge Says He Will Rule.

Aldridge still had his nerve with him to-night. When asked what he thought of the result he said:

"I'm licked and I know I'm licked. I don't have to have it kicked into me. I have no comment to make beyond this: They are saying that the Republican organization in Monroe County is smashed. That is not so. The organization is intact and I shall remain at its head."

The Aldridge followers said nothing at all. They were overcome by the defeat, from James L. Hotchkiss, Chairman of the County Committee, down to the ward heelers.

Victor Formerly Led His Party.

Because he has never before held office it must not be thought that Mr. Havens is a newcomer in politics. Far from it. He was one of the men who twenty years ago sought to get together the best elements of the Democratic Party so that resistance might be interposed to the corrupting influence of the then developing Aldridge machine. He was Secretary and then President of the Flower City Democracy, but disintegration set in after the defeat of D. B. Hill for Governor, and the rise of Bryanism killed the movement. So it is the old leader of Rochester's Democracy who has come to his own.

Some of these things have been forgotten in the heat of the struggle, but to-night the new Democracy is glad to recall them, because of the hope given for the future. This is not to intimate that Rochester is going to be a Democratic city or Monroe County a Democratic county. The city has been Republican since 1899, and probably will remain so; the county the same. But in the overturning that took place to-day both city and county have rid themselves of the incubus that has stifled independent political thought and action, and the way is now open for the restoration of normal conditions in both parties.

All day Rochester has been filling up with political observers, newspaper and otherwise, from the outside. Some got here Saturday and Sunday, and predicted that the old machine could not be upset, to say nothing of being destroyed. To-night, as they are recovering from their surprise, there is a common opinion—the earthquake that has happened here will send its waves to Albany and beyond, giving fair warning as to what will happen elsewhere to those who stand for the things that Aldridge stands for.

Division of the City.

It is worth while to look over the detailed tabulation of the city vote and see what happened. It is not hard to follow the situation, because the analysis is really very simple, indeed. This city has a central business district, up and down Main Street, with the Genesee River dividing it into east and west sides. Clustered around the business district in various spots are the slum districts, which, as a matter of fact, are not very bad slums. A little further away from the heart of the city are the sections where the skilled workingmen reside, and still more removed from the centre of business the better residential sections, stretching out with fine boulevards, to the eastward and westward.

The apportionment of Rochester is Aldridge's own. He has changed it from time to time to suit the exigencies of his political needs. On one occasion, after a certain district had been bold enough to elect a real Democratic Assemblyman, Aldridge changed the boundaries of that and the two adjoining districts so as to include in the offending one some hundreds of acres of city park land and exactly one additional voter. Then he cut slices off it and added them to the two adjoining, so that all three would be henceforth safely Republican.

Pitiful Showing of Aldridge.

By such means as these it has come about that the First, Second, and Fifth Wards, part of the Third Ward, (Aldridge's,) and one district in each of the Fourth, Seventh, and Ninth Wards, are slum wards, as that term is known in Rochester. The First, Second, Fifth, Seventh, and Ninth Wards are known as Democratic wards, populated largely by Aldridge Democrats. The Fifteenth Ward is also Democratic in ordinary elections, but in the face of local conditions as they have existed in the past it is nothing short of a joke to call such wards Democratic, as may be judged from the fact that in the last city campaign the Democrats elected exactly two Aldermen.

Aldridge to-day found these localities the only places in the entire city remaining faithful to his standard. He carried the First Ward, which was Democratic in the election of 1908, and the Second Ward, by a plurality vastly greater than that given to Mr. Perkins. The Third Ward, his own, he saved by piling up a big vote in the one election district that includes some slum territory. The Fourth Ward, which a mixture of Aldridge Democrats and machine Republicans has always held safe for the boss, he carried to-day by less than 200, as against a plurality of 450 for Perkins in 1908. The only other ward that Aldridge carried was the Sixteenth, and that he kept by only four votes, whereas Perkins carried it by 600.

Among the residential wards of the better classes, from those where the modest homes of workingmen predominate to those of the wealthier people, there was a common result. The Tenth Ward, which from an organization standpoint has been the pet of the Republican organization, gave Perkins 400 plurality in 1908; to-day it went for Havens by over 200 votes. The Twelfth Ward, which gave Perkins a plurality of over 1,500 votes, was carried by Havens by 824 plurality.

Votes Were Openly Bought.

Havens's victory, too, was won in the face of open and flagrant corruption. The Aldridge workers had $50,000 ready to spend "where it would do the most good," and they spent it, or most of it. There has probably never been an election in Rochester where vote buying, in the wards where the more flagrant, corrupt practices were possible, was more shameless. If the result had not been so overwhelming, this open trading in votes would be the great feature of the day's proceedings.

These statements are not made at random. The simple fact was that the Aldridge managers, knowing that they could not meet Havens on the issues before the voters, circulated little printed matter, spent little or nothing for speechmaking talent, and saved their money for election day. To-day it was poured out.

The County Court House, where sit the Justices of the Supreme Court, stands at Main and Fitzhugh Streets. In Fitzhugh Street, beneath the shadow of the great building, is a polling place, that of the First District of the First Ward. Uniformed policemen guarded the voting booth, making a pretext to keep the workers back of the lines which the State law draws around all places where votes are to be cast. Chatting with these policemen, the henchmen of the Republican machine, many of them city and county office holders, plied their trade of vote buying. They were seen by many observers openly to take the voters up to the booth, watch them as they passed behind the curtain that shields the voting machines, and give them slips of white paper when they came out. The slips of paper were redeemable in cash at a Front Street saloon not far away.

Workers Entered the Booths.

The correspondent of THE TIMES saw this same cheerful process going on at a polling place within a stone's throw of Main Street, just across the Genesee River. He made an automobile trip around some of the wards and watched the machine men still at work, even after the extra editions of the afternoon papers were on the streets with exposures of the traffic, giving specifications of place and incident.

The climax was reached down at the polling place of the Second District in the Second Ward. This is the section along the railroad tracks; near by is Rochester's "red light district." The little gray barn of a polling place was surrounded by a goodly number of workers wearing Aldridge badges, fully half of whom the guide of the inspection party recognized as city or county officeholders and called by name. There were a few Havens workers about making ineffectual efforts to talk to approaching voters, and, of course, the inevitable policeman.

One dollar, two dollars, and five dollars were the prices quoted in the vote market to-day through the First, Second, and other slum wards. There was a story told that an Aldridge worker went into a polling place and got an Inspector of Elections to change a $10 bill so that he could pay a floater outside. In some of the polling districts in the Aldridge Democratic wards the side doors of saloons, which were ordered closed by Mayor Edgerton, were liberally patronized by the voters, who were cashing in inside. In the Fifth District of the Eleventh Ward three city firemen in uniform were working outside the polling place with Aldridge badges.

Havens Rebukes a Leader.

One thing that happened to-day showed the mettle of James S. Havens. He is a little man physically, although you forget that when he begins to talk on the platform. But the platform, to most campaigners, is one thing and the street where the voters are mustered in is another. Not so with Havens, as Peter Sheridan, the alleged Democratic leader of the First Ward, discovered. Sheridan has remained leader of that ward, although known to have Aldridge affiliations, because nobody could be obtained who promised any better. This morning, when the vote buying was at its height at the polling place by the Court House, word came to Mr. Havens that no Democratic workers with badges were in sight.

He jumped a car and started for Sheridan's place of business, found his man, and insisted that he go over to the Court House.

"Now, Sheridan," demanded Mr. Havens, "are you for me or against me?"

"Why," faltered the big fellow, "I'm for you."

"Well," replied Havens, "they tell me that you're against me, and it's up to you to prove that you're not."

"I was here at 5:30 this morning," Sheridan began again, "and I've got to attend to my business, haven't I?"

"Very well," answered Havens, "then you put a badge on every one of these fellows here and see that they stay on their jobs."

There were two more candidates running to-day, a Socialist and a Prohibitionist, but nobody has taken the trouble yet to figure out what their votes were.

A report circulated during the day that William J. Conners, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, was in town to work for Havens was quickly denied and discredited.

Crowd Parades with Havens.

As the voting was done by machine, the result was known early, and the Aldridge men admitted their defeat and closed up their quarters. The Democrats and their Republican allies started to get up a big street parade, but a steady downpour of rain stopped them. So the crowd piled over to Democratic Headquarters in the Whitcomb House. Mr. Havens had come down there after dinner and things began to happen forthwith. There were business men and ministers and street car employes and women and children in the crowd, but that didn't make any difference. Everybody shouted for Havens, and he came down stairs. They grabbed him by the arms and legs and hair and put him upon a half a dozen shoulders. Somebody started up the chorus of the campaign song:

Hold the fort for Jim is coming,
George is on the run;
Graft and Boodle rule no longer,
Victory is won.

Round and round the big lobby of the Whitcomb House they paraded, until "Sunny Jim," as lots of people call him here, begged off, made a little speech of thanks, and started for home in a taxicab. Then the celebrants began all over to tell each other, "We knew Jim would do it all the time."

Havens had arrayed against him one of the strongest political organizations in the State. The campaign lasted only seventeen days, and he was compelled to rely on hastily constructed machinery. He stood on a platform advocating tariff reform in the interests of the consumer, a revision of the duties on wool and woolen goods, a removal of the tax on hides and lumber, a removal of the tariff on iron ore, an income tax, and, finally, advocating independence of all political bosses of any party.

Aldridge contented himself with general proclamations in favor of the policies of the Republican Administration. On the tariff proposition he was regarded as a "stand-patter." Both candidates declared for reciprocity with Canada, an employes' compensation act, a parcels post, and a postal savings bank, although Aldridge's position in these matters was less clearly defined than his opponent's.

Mr. Havens is a lawyer and a former partner of the late Congressman Perkins, whom he succeeds. He was born in Weedsport, Cayuga County, in 1859. He was graduated from Yale in 1884. He came to Rochester immediately after graduating, was admitted to the bar in 1886, and has practiced law here ever since.

SCARE FOR REPUBLICANS.

Makes Every District Doubtful, Says One House Leader.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—"It makes every Republican district doubtful."

That was the comment this evening of one of the stalwart Republicans in the House on the result of to-day's election in the Thirty-second New York District, where George W. Aldridge was beaten by James S. Havens. It was the frankest comment made by any Republican who discussed the matter.

Sereno E. Payne of the Auburn district, the dean of the New York Republican delegation, said: "The campaign was one in which the dominant issue was the personal character of one of the candidates. There were no National issues involved, except that Mr. Foss, a Democrat from Massachusetts, went into the district and made one anti-protection speech."

Representative Fish of New York, one of the insurgents, said he was not at all surprised. "I have felt all along," he said, "that it was a most unfortunate nomination. But the fight was not on National lines. A local issue dominated."

The New York Republicans in Congress generally expected Aldridge to win, chiefly because they could hardly believe that his superb machine could be overthrown.

The Democrats were tremendously happy over the news. They hailed it with accord as another distinct sign of the times.

William J. Bryan said of it: "It is a great victory, a wonderful victory. It is portent of what may be expected in the country generally in the Fall elections. It shows that the people have lost confidence in the Republican Party."

WILL CARRY THE STATE—MACK.

Conners Declares Democrats Must Demand Full Corruption Inquiry.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 19.—When informed of the result of the election at Rochester Norman L. Mack, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said:

"The election of Mr. Havens is an unmistakable repudiation of the tariff policy of the Republican Party. Mr. Havens made his fight on the tariff issue, and in his success the Democracy gains not only a very able man in Congress, but the voters have shown that they are tired of accepting promises from the Republican Party which are never redeemed. I believe it foretells for the State of New York a Democratic State administration.

State Chairman William J. Conners made the following statement:

"Mr. Havens's victory should serve as an object lesson to both Democrats and Republicans.

"The Democracy has a great opportunity. The party must assist in the enactment of a bill for primary reform. The Hinman-Green bill is the nearest approach to a satisfactory primary law that has been found. The party must also support a thorough investigation regardless of whether Democrats or Republicans are involved."

HAVENS FOR GOVERNOR NOW.

Talk Already Begins at Albany—A Hughes Victory, Says Barnes.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 19.—The crushing defeat sustained by Boss Aldridge in Monroe is the one topic of conversation at the Capitol to-night. The Democrats here are jubilant. They look upon the victory of James S. Havens as the forerunner of a greater victory in the Fall. The Republicans who are aware of the firm grip George W. Aldridge had on the Monroe County machine are stunned.

It is admitted to-night among both Republicans and Democrats that James S. Havens, the victor in the fight, for months to come will be the most talked of man in his party. Strangely enough, the Republicans are more outspoken than the Democrats in voicing the opinion that he is the logical candidate for Governor on the Democratic ticket next Fall. One crestfallen Republican even told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that the people of Monroe who voted for Havens may unwittingly have aided in the making of a future President. He knew Havens personally, too. The Democrats as a rule dodged the Gubernatorial question.

"It's a little early," said one, "and besides I have too many friends who are candidates for that nomination themselves."

The comment made by the two local bosses was interesting.

"It was a great victory for Gov. Hughes, this defeat of a good Republican," said William Barnes, Jr., the Republican overlord of Albany and the surrounding counties, with bitter irony.

"Hughes had nothing to do with it, nor had the $1,000 check that Hotchkiss brought out all about," said Patrick E. McCabe, the Democratic boss of Albany. "It was due to a combination of circumstances. It would be difficult to put one's finger on just what caused it. There is a drift, a feeling among the people that the Republicans have been in too long. It's foolish to attribute the result to Hughes."

Gov. Hughes learned of the result before he left the executive chamber, but declined to make any comment.

Among the Republican members of the Legislature who are affiliated with the machine element there was an apparent inclination to-night to discount the effect of the Hotchkiss revelations regarding the $1,000 "present" to Mr. Aldridge and to hold the "draft" and the high cost of living responsible for his defeat.

GREAT VICTORY, CROKER SAYS.

And Presages Democratic Success in the State Next Fall.

There was jubilation in the National Democratic Club last night when news came from Rochester that Aldridge had been beaten by Havens for Congress in Monroe County. Every member who appeared whooped it up for as cheering a piece of news as any which has recently come to New York Democrats. And in the predictions of a brilliant future for Democracy in the State, Richard Croker, former Tammany chieftain, led off.

"It is a great victory," said Mr. Croker. "Greater than many realize, for it will have its effect throughout the State, I am sure."

"Do you think it can be taken as an indication that the Democrats will succeed in placing the next Governor in the chair?" he was asked.

"It looks that way," said Mr. Croker. "The people are getting tired of a Republican Administration. They have had enough of it, and are beginning to see that Democratic rule would be far better. This is the turning point right now. You will soon see the Republican leaders falling one by one, until Democracy will again be in the saddle in New York State."

It was suggested that, owing to the fact that Judge John B. Lynn and the Independence League at Rochester, joined forces with the Democrats in electing Mr. Havens, there were signs that William R. Hearst might again be a candidate for Governor next Fall.

"Now look here," said Mr. Croker, "I am out of politics—out for good and all, and I guess I had better not go too far in the way of predicting. All I can say is that it looks like a Democratic victory next Fall."

Mr. Croker dined at the Democratic Club last night with Arthur Brisbane, Andrew Freedman, and several other members, but he forestalled any guessing on this by saying that his presence in the club had no political significance and that Mr. Brisbane was an old friend. He said he was merely bidding his New York friends good-bye before sailing for England this morning on the Lusitania.

After dinner he held an informal reception, his old friends among the members filing past him, each grasping his hand and wishing him long life and happiness.

RESULT APPROVED HERE.

By Democrats and Some Republicans, Including Seth Low.

There was great jubilation among local Democrats last night over the result of the defeat of Aldridge. Commendation of the result also came from certain quarters in the Republican ranks, particularly from the Hughes men, but few of them were willing to allow their names to be used with what they had to say.

Seth Low, who was elected President of the Republican Club on Monday night, was a notable exception to this, however.

"I am glad to hear of the defeat of Aldridge," he said. "It means better things for both parties in this State. It means that the people are thoroughly aroused against the combination of politics and business in legislation."

Ex-Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, one of the "conservative" leaders of Tammany Hall, and one of the principal organizers of the Democratic League, said:

"The election of Mr. Havens was to be expected. The Democratic fight was made on the issues of the tariff, the high cost of living, and the methods of the machine Republican leaders. The time has come when the people are demanding clean and honest government. They realize that to get this sort of government they must elect men whose probity, honesty, and integrity are beyond question. The time has also come when the Democratic Party can win by nominating clean men and making a proper campaign."

S. Stanwood Menken, another of the local organizers of the League, said:

"I am delighted. This shows us that we can put up the right sort of men and still win out."

Mayor Gaynor was seen at his home in Brooklyn, but would not comment on the election.

Charles F. Murphy was at his country place at Good Ground, L. I., and could not be reached.

Timothy L. Woodruff, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, could not be located up to a late hour.

All County Chairman Griscom would say was: "It came as a great surprise to me. I confidently expected that Mr. Aldridge would be elected."

MORE TO GO, SAYS FOSS.

All Who Voted for Tariff Bill—Osborne Delighted Over Result.

BOSTON, April 19.—Congressman Eugene N. Foss, who was one of the principal speakers at the rally for James S. Havens in Rochester, N. Y., last Friday night, had this to say of Havens's election to-night:

"It was the Payne-Aldrich bill that defeated Aldridge. While there were other contributing causes I will admit, the issue there was mainly an honest revision of the tariff and Canadian reciprocity. The pledge made by the Republicans that they would make an honest revision of the tariff is in the people's minds.

"This result means only one thing, and that is that all the chaps who voted for the Payne-Aldrich bill have got to go. Aldrich and Hale have already been taken ill, haven't they? And there will be a lot who will be taken ill or will not run, or something else will happen. The old-time leaders have had their innings, and the tide is turning strongly against them."

Thomas M. Osborne of Auburn, N. Y., formerly Public Service Commissioner and now Chairman of the Democratic League in New York, is in Boston to-night. When informed of the political overturn in the Rochester district he said:

"I am perfectly delighted, both personally and politically. Havens's election and Aldridge's defeat is perfectly magnificent. It is a splendid thing for the State and a great advantage for the Democratic Party in the Nation."

GEN. HENRY FOR SURVEYOR.

Republicans Indorse and Taft Has Been Asked to Name Him.

Lloyd C. Griscom, Chairman of the Republican County Committee, announced yesterday that the local organization had indorsed the candidacy of Gen. Nelson H. Henry for Surveyor of the Port, and that he had written President Taft asking that he be named.

Gen. Henry, who has been closely identified with the organization for a long time, is a stanch Hughes man, and his appointment will add to the blow the State machine received in the defeat of George W. Aldridge. At one time Mr. Aldridge was mentioned to succeed Gen. Clarkson.

Mr. Griscom held a conference with Senator Root before the latter returned to Washington yesterday and obtained his consent to the indorsement of Gen. Henry. It was generally conceded last night that the latter will be made Surveyor.

man said to a Central Office detective, who had been looking for pickpockets:

"Ain't it a shame! Some of these folks will catch their death of cold from this wetting, and maybe die."

WED AMID LILIES AND ROSES.

How Miss Gould Became Mrs. Drexel in St. Bartholomew's.

The interior of St. Bartholomew's for the wedding was superbly decorated with Spring flowers, calla lilies, and pink roses. The panels of the side walls were decorated with daisies, and the framework, gallery, and pillars were garlanded with smilax and greens.

At every other pew on the nave were high staves wound with smilax topped by large bowls filled with the tallest of pink roses arranged in clusters that rose far above the heads of the guests as they walked up the main aisle.

The side aisles were similarly marked with bowls on standards of great clusters of long-stemmed white calla lilies. Along the sides of the church high up were basket effects in apple blossoms, pink quince, and other flowers. Profuse as the decorations were, they were simple.

At each side of the chancel were placed huge palm trees, and white lilies and Spring flowers filled in the sides, with vases of white flowers on the altar.

The guests began to arrive long before 3 o'clock, and from 3:30 to after 4 there was a special musical programme under the direction of Arthur Hyde, the organist of the church. Those taking part included the choir of the church, forty-five voices, boys and men and women, and twenty-five choirboys from St. Agnes's Chapel, and the organist, Mr. Hyde, assisted by Miss Caroline Hudson, John Spargur, violinist, and Charles Schuetze, harpist.

The opening number was Mascagni's "Hymn to the Sun," followed by Horatio Parker's "Twenty-third Psalm," and then came the Chorale from Wagner's "Meistersinger," rendered by the choir. Massenet's Intermezzo and other selections followed.

The bridal party walked up the nave to Martin's "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden," and during the betrothal Barnby's "O, Perfect Love," was very softly sung, and Parker's "Lord, Who at Cana's Wedding Feast," was the recessional.

The Bridal Procession.

The bridesmaids arrived about 4, and little Miss Edith Gould, the flower girl, came shortly after. Little Ellin Mackay, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay, had the motor she and her companion were in caught in the crush of vehicles, and the bridal party had to wait about ten minutes for her, the bride arriving almost on time. Mrs. Mackay was ill and did not attend the wedding.

As soon as the bridal party was complete and everything had been arranged without any flurry of excitement over the delays, and with bride serene and smiling, the bridal procession started, preceded up the aisle by twenty-five choirboys from St. Agnes's Chapel, who sang "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden."

These were followed by the ushers in the following order: Nowell Griffith of London and William Rhinelander Stewart, Jr., a cousin of the bridegroom; Kingdon Gould and Craig Biddle, Jay Gould and Julian N. Noyes, and John Fell and Viscount Maidstone, the fiancé of Miss Margaretta Drexel.

The ushers wore the scarfpins set with the initials G. and D in diamonds, presented by Mr. Drexel, and gardenias in their frock coats.

The two little flower girls were Miss Edith Gould and Miss Ellin Mackay, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay, came next. They were in white frocks having Dutch necks, with blue sashes, wore large straw hats faced with lace frills and trimmed with blue ribbons and pink camelias, and carried gilt baskets filled with pink camelias.

Then came the bridesmaids, who were, first, Miss Margaretta Drexel, the sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Marjorie Curtis, the daughter of Dr. Holbrooke Curtis and Mrs. Curtis; second, Miss Hamilton, a cousin of the bride and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pierson Hamilton, and Miss Beatrice Claflin, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Claflin; then came Miss Elsie Nicoll, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Nicoll, and Miss Dorothy Randolph of Philadelphia.

These girls all carried cluster bouquets of orange blossoms and pink rose buds tied with pink ribbons, and also wore the style of gray enamel watches set with diamonds that were the bride's gift. They were suspended on crystal chains worn around the neck. Their gowns were of the period of the Restoration, with scant skirts clearing the floor by three or four inches of Nattier blue satin charmeuse veiled with overskirts of pink chiffon, the latter held in bouffant fashion by blue ribbon sashes tied in the back. Below this, over a drapery, came plaited chiffon and lace. The square Dutch necks were finished with lace, and the bodices, slightly bloused, were banded with lace. The sashes were of blue satin.

They wore boots of Nattier blue satin, and their high turbans were of Nattier blue straw, veiled with pink tulle, with a pink ostrich tip at the left side near the back.

Miss Vivian Gould, who immediately preceded the bride and Mr. Gould, wore pale pink veiled with blue chiffon and pink satin boots, and a pink straw hat with blue ostrich tips, her gown being the same in fashion but reversing the color scheme of the bridesmaids' frocks.

Miss Gould's Bridal Gown.

Last in the procession were the bride, Miss Gould, and her father.

The bridal gown was of white satin charmeuse, cut with the square Dutch neck and train five yards long, fastened to the shoulders in a box plait. The body of the robe had a tunic drapery of chiffon embroidered in orange blossoms and foliage. Duchesse and point lace twelve inches or more wide was draped across the bodice and down the left side to the hem and carried around the skirt. The end of the train, which was square, was bordered with embroidery in orange blossom pattern. Sprays of orange blossoms were caught here and there in the lace.

Miss Gould carried a large bouquet of orange blossoms and white roses. She wore the diamond and pearl pendant given by her aunt, Miss Helen Gould, and her string of matched pearls.

The voluminous veil was of Brussels net, bordered several inches deep with point lace, and this was arranged a little back of her pompadour and held in place with orange blossoms.

Mr. Drexel was waiting at the chancel with his best man, his brother, Armstrong Drexel.

The ceremony was performed by Bishop Scarborough of New Jersey, who had christened and confirmed the bride and all of her brothers and sisters, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, rector of St. Bartholomew's Church, and the Rev. Ernest Matthews of Lakewood, N. J.

Immediately after the ceremony the floral decorations were removed and sent to the Plant Guild, which distributed them the various hospitals and infirmaries and the sick throughout the city. The choice of beneficiaries was left to Mr. McConnell, who for years has been the Gould florist.

The Reception.

About six hundred invitations were issued for the reception, and although the remodeled Gould residence is most spacious, there was only comfortable room for those who attended it.

At the house also the decorations were extremely beautiful. The entrance door was framed in green and the entrance hall looked like a woodland bower, with Australian tree ferns at the base of the wide stairway, and huge ferns and palms arranged through the hall with vases of pink roses here and there.

The Regency room at the left with its dark walnut woodwork picked out in gold and its rich red hangings, was decorated with American Beauty roses, while the dining room at the right, with its delicate coloring, was decorated with pink and white roses and Spring flowers, including apple blossoms.

Ascending the stairway the guests were received in the foyer hall, also decorated with tree ferns, Spring flowers, and roses, by Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, and after that passed on to the left to the ballroom, another bower of green, white, and pink, where Mr. and Mrs. Drexel and the bridesmaids stood to receive them. The salon was also decorated in pink and white.

Nahan Franko's Orchestra played various selections during the reception, including the Marjorie Waltz, by Franko; Love Scene, Suite Romantique, by Herbert; Grieg's Wedding Day, Elgar's Chanson de Matin, and Chanson de la Nuit, Bizet's suite L'Arlesienne, Tschaikowski's Romance, Mendelssohn Nocturne, Midsummer Night's Dream, ballet music by Rubinstein, Schumann's Evening Song, and Sousa's Stars and Stripes, and also The Star-Spangled Banner.

The Wedding Cake a Feature.

A feature of the reception was the wedding cake. Small pieces of cake were put up in white satin boxes made by Tiffany, and for certain members of the family theret were silver boxes filled with cake as keepsakes.

The huge wedding cake itself was a marvel of the confectioner's art. It was arranged in three tiers, nearly fifty inches high by almost twenty-four inches in diameter at the base. The three layers were joined by a fancy iced framework and the edifice illustrated youth, love, and prosperity.

On the lowest layer there were white candy horns of plenty, with garlands of candy orange blossoms.

On the second tier, representing youth, was a candy bowl supported on the backs of several cupids, and in this was a fountain with dolphins spouting crystal streams of candy.

The cake was crowned with the temple of love, made of columns of crystallized sugar with a dome to match, and inside of the temple stood a cupid with his bow and arrow ready to shoot the next victim.

Delmonico was the caterer.

Gifts of Home and Diamonds.

The wedding gifts were shown in a room on the third floor, and were greatly admired. The gifts were many and costly, and some very fine jewels were given the bride by the Gould family, while the Drexel family had confined itself to chests of silver and other silver articles and objects. The presents from Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel and the English friends of the bride and bridegroom have all been kept in England, and will be brought back by Mr. and Mrs. Drexel when they return from England in the late Summer or Autumn.

Mr. Gould gave his daughter the house at 1,015 Fifth Avenue, and this will include its complete furnishings, the latter to be put in later. He also gave her a very beautiful necklace of the flat Oriental design, an openwork pattern, with a wide ribbon pendant of diamonds in the front, from which another pendant hung.

Mrs. Gould gave her daughter a plastron bodice ornament of diamonds and sapphires and a diamond-studded watch on a chain of fine pearls.

Edwin Gould, an uncle of the bride, gave a wide collar of matched pearls, with diamond sides.

Miss Helen Gould, the bride's aunt, presented her niece with a corsage ornament consisting of a small diamond bow-knot, from which hung a large diamond-studded circlet, having in its centre a huge pearl framed in diamonds.

The Duchess de Talleyrand-Perigord, another aunt, presented a fine black pearl set in a ring.

Howard Gould gave a large silver punch bowl.

Frank Gould gave his niece diamonds set in a platinum bracelet.

Mrs. Kingdon, the grandmother of the bride, gave her a pearl and diamond bracelet and she gave Mr. Drexel a wonderful diamond and emerald ring.

The bride's brothers, Jay and Kingdon Gould, and her sisters, the Misses Vivian, Edith, and Gloria Gould, gave her a solid gold tea service complete, in the soft dull finish.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Sr., gave chests of family silver, much of it rare old English ware.

The employes of the Gould household gave the bride a handsome old silver cake basket.

The English employes of the Drexels presented a silver platter.

The American employes of the Drexels also sent a large silver piece.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel sent a silver compote and silver dishes.

Mrs. Clarence Mackay, whose youngest daughter was a flower girl, sent eighteen silver-gilt plates.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish gave a gold and platinum handbag with the bride's monogram in diamonds.

Mrs. C. B. Alexander sent an oval brooch of enamel and diimonds with large cat's-eye centre.

Dr. Leslie Ward gave a wide barrette studded with dimonds.

Lady Paget's gift was a circular clock in blue enamel with a silver rim.

Frank Munsey gave a large brooch, a hollow circlet of diamonds.

Robert Russell's gift was a platinum chain with a diamond and turquois pendant.

Mrs. Vanderbilt gave a small enamel clock that strikes the minutes in silvery chime effect.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., gave a set of blue and gold plates.

Mrs. George W. Childs's present was a grandfather's clock.

Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt sent a silver-framed mirror.

Anthony Drexel, Jr., gave his bride a beautiful cabachon sapphire ring, an uncommonly beautiful stone of the "star" variety.

Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan gave a clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schiff sent a set of gold service plates.

There were many paintings and pictures, at least twenty clocks, and many more fans, some hand painted and in lace, and several huge and beautiful ostrich feather fans, one in black, with blue enamel and turquois handle, being especially handsome. There was no end of exquisite plates, boullion sets, marbles, bronzes, and innumerable pieces of silver.

Three fine specimens of antique Chinese vases in dull tones, chiefly blue on a white ground, were especially admired. Several sets of books were among the gifts.

It had been reported that the honeymoon was to be spent on Mr. Gould's yacht, the Atalanta, which is being prepared for a voyage. Their honeymoon plans were not divulged yesterday afternoon, but it is expected that when they go to England to attend the wedding of Mr. Drexel's sister, Miss Margaretta Drexel, to Viscount Maidstone on June 8, that they will make the trip on the yacht.

INSURGENTS WARY OF ALDRICH MOVE

Sure They Had Hale Beaten, but Not So Sure Aldrich Won't Try to Come Back.

BOTH GIVE OUT LETTERS

Hale "Satisfied with Five Terms"—Aldrich to Stay on Monetary Board —Talk of Other Retirements.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Little serious attention was given at the Senate end of the Capitol to-day to anything but the announced retirement of Senators Aldrich and Hale at the end of this Congress.

Senator Aldrich appeared on the floor for the first time since the report of his retirement was originally published in these dispatches last week. He was at once surrounded by friends, Democrats and Republicans, who were eager to express their regret at his determination to leave public life and to renew their assurances of fealty.

Senator Hale spent his time at the Capitol in his private room, where he was constantly surrounded by his close friends. He did not see any newspaper men there, but did at his home this evening, and talked a little about his retirement. He said it had been arranged that the official notice should be given out in Maine.

"I have mailed by letter to State Chairman Byron Boyd," he said, "and it will be given to the newspapers by him.

"At my time of life one is anxious to avoid personal contests. I felt that I was entitled to a period of rest. My friends believe I could be re-elected, but the turmoil incident to the canvass has been very unpleasant to me. I am anxious to go back to Maine. That is one reason why I want to get out. There is no place where I am happier than at my home in Ellsworth.

"I am very glad now that I made the decision. It relieves me of many worries. I am satisfied to be judged on the record of what I have done."

Senator Aldrich's Letter.

Earlier in the day Senator Aldrich had given out the following letter, which he had sent on Sunday to Gov. Pothier:

Warwick, R. I., April 17, 1910.

His Excellency, Hon. Aram J. Pothier, Governor of Rhode Island.

My Dear Governor: I find that I shall not have an opportunity to see you before my return to Washington to-morrow. My purpose in coming to Rhode Island at this time was to apprise you and other political friends in connection with the approaching campaign of a decision long since made that I cannot under any circumstances be a candidate for re-election to the Senate. At the earnest solicitation of friends I have withheld this announcement, which is now enforced by personal reasons which are for me imperative.

It is a source of satisfaction to me to know that my successor is sure to be a Republican whose fidelity to the principles and Governmental policies of the party cannot be questioned. I am confident that the important legislation to which the party and the Administration are pledged, with one exception, will have been enacted into laws before the close of the present session.

I do not intend to resign my position on the National Monetary Commission, nor to relinquish my efforts to secure as soon as possible the adoption of a wise banking and monetary system by the United States. On some proper occasion I shall express to the people of Rhode Island my appreciation of the unfailing support and confidence which they have accorded to me through more than forty years of public service.

Very truly yours,

NELSON W. ALDRICH.

Senators Not Talking Much.

Announcement of the retirement of the two powerful Senate leaders had one peculiar effect to-day, in that it produced an extraordinary reticence upon the part of their colleagues to discuss the situation for publication. Hardly a Republican, regular or insurgent, would say anything for quotation or express an opinion as to the result.

One reason for this is obvious. The retirement throws open the question of leadership in the Senate, and as to that there are so many ambitions in the Chamber that no man could tell whom he might hit by talking.

One insurgent, Mr. Dolliver, expressed himself in characteristic fashion. When he was asked upon whom he thought the mantle of leadership would fall he replied:

"We are going to take it over to the Smithsonian Institution and keep it as a relic of an obsolete system."

Doubt Aldrich's Good Faith.

Privately, however, the insurgents are not so reticent. They receive the statements of Senators Aldrich and Hale with a marked difference of credulity. That of Mr. Hale they believe, and greet it at once as a victory for their own cause. They say that Mr. Hale retires simply because he knows now that he could not be elected.

But with entire unanimity they reject as incredible the Aldrich announcement. With one accord they describe it as merely a political trick, designed to quiet the opposition in Rhode Island until the Legislature has been chosen, when they confidently expect to see Mr. Aldrich express a willingness to take another term.

The insurgent belief that Mr. Hale retires to avoid a fight simply accepts his own statement at par. But they declare that he would have been beaten if he had made the fight, whereas he asserts that his friends had assured him he could be re-elected. Mr. Hale himself, however, was doubtful of his ability to live through the contest. He literally feared that it would cost him his life.

Fate of Cannon and Others.

The air was full of talk of retirements at the Capitol to-day. On the House side came the announcement that Representative Lowden of Illinois, one of the stanch Cannon men, had declared his intention to quit. Mr. Lowden has been in poor health for some time, an dthis is assigned as the reason for his refusal to run again. There was also talk that Sereno Payne, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and titular author of the tariff law, would also soon make a similar announcement.

And, of course, there was a revival of the talk that Speaker Cannon would have something to say along the same line, despite the manner in which he has defied the opposition to put him out. The Cannon talk aroused no interest, however, chiefly because of the settled conviction everywhere in the House that very soon after the last of the Administration bills has been safely made law a resolution vacating the Speakership will be submitted and put through with the support of anywhere from 75 to 100 Republicans.

SENATOR HALE'S WITHDRAWAL.

Satisfied with Five Terms and Won't Contest for Seat.

AUGUSTA, Me., April 19.—The letter from Senator Eugene Hale to Byron Boyd, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, in which he declines to "engage in a conflict for the Senatorship" was received by Chairman Boyd to-night. Senator Hale does not once refer to the condition of his health, as a reason for retirement.

Washington, April 18.

The Hon. Byron Boyd, Chairman Republican State Committee.

My Dear Mr. Chairman: Your notice that the State Committee requests me to preside at the June convention has been received, and I fully appreciate the honor and the confidence which the request implies. But it is not at all certain that the session of Congress will end before July, therefore the committee should select some other presiding officer.

Besides this, it is not certain that I will be in Maine at the time, and I take this occasion to say, through you, that I decline to engage in a conflict for the Senatorship.

Longer public service is not necessary to my peace of mind, and the prospect of retirement has little in it that is disagreeable to me. The party has given me what no other man in Maine has ever received, five unanimous nominations for five full continuous terms in the Senate, and it seems not fitting for me to make a personal contest for the succession.

The situation will not find me, however, either a grumbler or a malcontent. My desire is to see Gov. Fernald re-elected by a good majority, with a Republican Legislature at his back. It is further most important that Maine should send four Republican Representatives to the next Congress, to avoid what may be the critical trial day for all Maine's industries and her business prosperity. Should the Democrats carry the next House of Representatives, within ninety days after the opening of the next Congress a free tariff bill will be sent to the Senate, in which Maine's principal industries and interests will be marked for slaughter. Whoever recalls the ituation under the Morrison bill, and later, under the Gorman-Wilson bill, will fully realize this.

And this disaster to Maine can only be prevented by the Republicans retaining control in the next House of Representatives. To this end a full Republican delegation from Maine in the next Congress will be needed more than ever before, and to secure this result all my sympathy and efforts are at the command of the party.

Congratulating you, Mr. Chairman on your good management of Republican campaigns here tofore, and with the hope of another Republican success in September, with every good personal wish, I am yours sincerely,

EUGENE HALE.

In 1899, when Senator Hale came up for re-election for his fourth term in the Senate, some opposition developed on account of his attitude in opposing the war with Spain. No one, however, desired to enter the lists against him, and he received a unanimous renomination in the caucus of the Republican members of the Legislature. When it came to the election of Senator Hale in that Legislature, several Republican members of the House, when their names were called, stated that they voted for Eugene Hale because he was the nomiree of the Republican Party.

Several months ago ex-Associate Justice Frederick A. Powers of the Maine Supreme Court announced his candidacy for the Senate, and for the first time since 1876, when Lot M. Morrill of Augusta was elected, a contest was started for one of the Maine Senatorships. Ex-Gov. William T. Cobb of Rockland, ex-Gov. John F. Hill of Augusta, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Congressman Edwin C. Burleigh of Augusta have also been mentioned as possible candidates.

Ex-Justice Powers, who for two years has been perfecting a campaign to defeat Senator Hale, when informed to-day that the Senator had decided not to be a candidate for re-election said that he was not surprised at the news. Mr. Powers said that Senator Hale's present ill-health was largely due to hard work in Washington and to the cares of the campaign for re-election which he begun. The former Judge expressed the opinion that he would be the next Senator from Maine.

BRYAN PLEADS FOR PORTO RICO

Urges Committee to Vote Funds to Destroy the Hookworm There.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—William Jennings Bryan arrived in Washington this morning and appeared before the House Committee on Insular Affairs to urge the appropriation of $375,000 for the eradication of the hookworm disease from Porto Rico, and a further appropriation for the establishment of a Pan-American college in the island. Mr. Bryan strongly indorsed the Taft Administration of the island's affairs. He spoke warmly of what had been accomplished under American rule.

"The present Administration," said Mr. Bryan, "has my entire confidence, so far as its good intentions are concerned."

In his talk before the committee Mr. Bryan confined himself to the subject of Porto Rico, using information he had obtained during his recent ten days' visit there, but in the corridors of the Capitol, where he held an impromptu reception of members of both parties, the Democratic candidate was induced to discuss events as recent as the announced retirement of Mr. Aldrich and Mr. Hale, and the change of rules in the House.

On both subjects he expressed himself as pleased.

"I have not been able to follow events very closely. I have only seen the papers occasionally, but was gratified to read of the action taken by Congress in the changes made in the Committee on Rules.

"There are three distinct advantages in the new system. First, the enlargement of the committee gives representation to the entire country, whereas the smaller committee formerly intrusted with this power necessarily represented only a small proportion of the people.

"Secondly, the selection of the members of the committee by caucus of each party is a decided improvement.

"Thirdly, the removal of the Speaker from the committee is an additional gain in that it makes the committee more independent."

"The Republicans have enjoyed the prestige and emoluments of victory, and they should not begrudge us the pleasure we find in the fact that their President is now compelled to admit that scarcity of money made low prices. He now contends that increased prices were mainly due to an increase in the currency, and he necessarily admits that low prices were mainly due to a lack of money.

"Those Democrats who helped the Republicans in 1896 ought to at least permit the regular Democrats to enjoy the victory. The Democrats who supported the ticket in 1896 are perfectly willing to forgive, as they have abundantly shown those who abandoned the party, but they are not asking forgiveness themselves for supporting the party.

POWER FOR COMMISSIONS.

Assembly Passes Bill Broadening Their Authority Over Street Railroads.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 19.—Without debate or dissent the Assembly passed to-day the bill introduced by Assemblyman James S. Parker amending the Public Service Commission law generally.

The bill broadens the powers of the commission in particular with reference to the transfer question. Under the Parker amendments the commissions are authorized to order a single fare over joint routes of street railroad companies operating a continuous line of transportation. The bill also defines the powers of the commissions with reference to fixing rates for the service of lighting corporations, on which recent court decisions have cast doubt.

DIXON, Ill., April 19.—Congressman Frank O. Lowden of the Thirteenth District announces that he will not be a candidate for re-election. Physicians' orders are given as the cause for his retirement.

Lower House Hastens to Clear Calendar, Passing Auto and Service Board Bills—Wire Companies' Conference To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 19.—Almost unprecedented activity marked proceedings in both branches of the Legislature to-day, and from now until final adjournment, tentatively fixed for the middle of next month, work at high pressure will be the rule.

Speaker Wadsworth of the Assembly, after a conference with the Chairmen of the various standing committees of the lower house, announced to-day that all the reform measures recommended by Gov. Hughes, with the exception of the Hinman-Green Direct Nominations bill, are likely to pass the Assembly. Over the direct primaries proposition a lively fight is expected, for some of the legislative leaders by no means share in the optimistic views voiced by Majority Leader George H. Cobb of the Senate, who hopes to bring about an agreement between the friends of the measure advocated by Gov. Hughes and those who support the less drastic bill indorsed by the Republican organization.

Speaker Wadsworth has urged upon the committee Chairmen the necessity of clearing the calendars of all important legislation prior to April 29, when it is expected the standing committees will discontinue their work to give way to the Committee on Rules, which will have charge of all legislation in the lower house from then until the Legislature adjourns sine die.

In the Assembly, at least, the work of clearing the calendars has begun with a vengeance. To-day were passed the Callan Automobile bill and the amendments to the Public Service law recommended by Gov. Hughes to strengthen that act generally. Speaker Wadsworth announced that there would be a conference to-morrow evening between representatives for the telephone and telegraph companies, the Public Service Commission for the Second District, and the Assembly leaders to whip the Merritt bill placing telegraph and telephone companies under the supervision of the Public Service Commission, into final form.

It is expected that this bill will be reported to the Assembly by the Judiciary Committee some time this week. The Cities Committee of the Assembly will hold a special meeting next Thursday to piece together the various bills reported by the Legislative Committee appointed to draft a new charter for the City of New York, whereupon these will be reported as a single measure, constituting the proposed new charter for the city. As Mayor Gaynor, who will have veto power over this measure, has come out against any charter changes for the present, it is not believed that the proposed charter ever will go into effect.

These measures, together with the direct nominations bills, constitute about all the legislation of prime importance remaining.

To-morrow the Assembly will meet under a close call to debate the Federal income tax amendments, which went over until then, owing to the absence of more than a score of members from the session to-day.

ASSEMBLY PASSES AUTO BILL.

Callan Measure Will Prevent Speed Trap Graft and Extend Speed Limit.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 19.—After conferences lasting several weeks between legislative leaders and interests that would be affected by its passage the bill to regulate the operation of motor vehicles, introduced by Assemblyman Albert S. Callan of Columbia, passed the lower House to-day with only three votes against it. The three members who could not be budged from their opposition were Assemblymen Lansing of Rensselaer, Gray of St. Lawrence, and Lee of Kings, all Republicans.

More than fifty amendments have been made to the bill since it was introduced early in January, emanating from owners and users of motor vehicles.

Assemblyman Dana of New York offered three amendments to the bill to-day. One provided that all fines and penalties for violation of the proposed law should be retained by the localities where they are collected. After Mr. Callan had explained that by having the fines go to the State the speed trap and the activities of the rural constables would cease to trouble motorists this amendment was voted down.

Mr. Lansing of Rensselaer wanted the Callan speed limit in rural districts reduced from thirty to twenty-five miles and the speed limit in cities of the second and third class and in villages reduced from fifteen miles to ten. Both amendments were voted down.

The Callan bill is primarily a revenue measure. Mr. Callan believes that it will not the State $1,000,000 a year, to be devoted to highway maintenance and improvement. It provides for a registration fee to be paid annually to the Secretary of State of $5 for each motor vehicle used for commercial purposes or for cars of 25 horse power or under; $10 for cars of from 25 to 35 horse power, $15 for cars of from 35 to 45 horse power, and $25 for all motor cars above that class.

It requires the driving of motor vehicles in a "careful and prudent" manner at all times, makes a speed of thirty-five miles an hour or more for one-quarter of a mile, presumptive evidence of reckless driving on country roads, establishes a speed limit of 15 miles an hour for cities of the second and third class and villages, and gives cities of the first-class the right to make their own traffic rules.

It provides for the licensing and examination of chauffeurs and makes the penalties for violation generally more rigid.

LITTLE HOPE FOR THE MINNEHAHA

Wrecked Liner Will Probably Go to Pieces, Perhaps in a Few Days.

PASSENGERS IN LONDON

Cheerful and Well Dressed—A Few of Them Liked the Scillys So Much That They Are Staying There.

LONDON, April 19.—The passengers of the wrecked steamship Minnehaha arrived at Paddington by special train at 9:30 this evening. They were met by a large party of relatives and friends, and the greetings were most affectionate.

All the passengers spoke in the highest terms of the efforts of the company to look after their safety and comfort.

PENZANCE, April 19.—The passengers from the Minnehaha arrived here on the mail boat from St. Mary's Island at 1:40 this afternoon. They had quite recovered from their experiences on the rocky coast of the Scilly Islands. Their coming made a stir in the little fishing village, and a big crowd had gathered at the dock. About the same time several trawlers arrived from the scene of the wreck, loaded with salvage. One fisherman, more fortunate than the others, had a big motor car on the deck of his craft and several cases of sewing machines.

The passengers had plenty of time to dress. When they arrived here the women were in fashionable seagoing costumes. Particular mention was made of Kenneth Grant of Harrisburg, Penn., one of the passengers, who visited the other cabins, reassuring the startled ones.

Another passenger, J. Kramer of New York, speaking of the splendid behavior of the women aboard the vessel, said that many of them went over the side into the boats joking and laughing.

With the exception of a few who were on deck at the time when the Minnehaha ran on the rocks, the passengers had very little idea as to how the accident occurred. Most of them were asleep, and knew nothing of the danger until aroused by the stewards or their fellow-passengers. Fortunately, the sea was calm, otherwise the ship would have been torn to pieces. Even when the sea is quiet there is a heavy ground swell off the islands, and seldom is a ship saved after once striking. Mariners who know the coast hold out little hope of the Minnehaha ever reaching port again.

HUGHTOWN, St. Mary's, Scilly Islands, April 19.—Three small steamers and a schooner are to-night standing by the wreck of the Minnehaha. All hope has practically been abandoned of saving the steamer, and at noon to-day, when the tide was high, everybody was ordered off the ship, because of the danger of her slipping from the reef and going to the bottom.

Most of the cargo and all but sixty cattle have been safely landed, but there is no food for the cattle here. The officers and crew expended all their energies throughout the morning in the work of lightening the steamer, and after the danger of her slipping had passed they returned to their labors. They hope to get the remainder of the cargo and cattle ashore to-morrow.

It was a jolly party of castaways that embarked to-day on the mail steamer for Penzance. Since the passing of the first alarm the sixty-six passengers had been in the best of spirits. They had escaped with their lives and baggage after an interesting experience and had been loaded with hospitality by the people of the Scillys. In fact, a few were so delighted with their reception that they decided to linger here for a few days as the guests of the Englishmen who first took them in.

The only regret of the shipwrecked ones appeared to be that they were leaving the liner that brought them from New York probably a hopeless wreck, for which Capt. Layland must give an account. The sympathy for the commander and officers, who are relieved of all responsibility by the passengers, is genuine and unanimous. Before embarking this morning all the passengers signed a statement addressed to the Directors of the Atlantic Transport Line in which the conduct of Capt. Layland was highly commended and the opinion expressed that he should be in no wise blamed for the accident.

The passengers declare their belief that accurate navigation during the three days of fog was impossible. Surgeon Gatley and Purser Hamand receive special praise for their efficiency in getting the women and children safely in and out of the small boats. George E. Crowell of Nevada came in for much praise from his fellow-passengers for the assistance which he rendered the officers and crew in reassuring the frightened ones and helping the women and children.

Another hero of the occasion was Billy Jenkins, a farmer who lives near the scene of the wreck. He arrived first at the wreck, reaching the steamer in his boat twenty minutes after she struck.

The Minnehaha lies on a reef by Maiden Bower Island in the northwestern part of the Scilly group, with fifteen feet of water in her front starboard compartment. A bevy of small craft surrounding her was engaged to-day in moving the cargo ashore, where a great litter of merchandise, automobiles, hides, and machinery was accumulating. A quantity of débris from the ship floated on the water. The crew, who were brought ashore yesterday, returned to their vessel to-day and continued the work of salvage. Salvage men arrived this morning from Penzance and made an examination of the steamer. There appears to be little chance of saving her and she probably will go to pieces within a few weeks, and in the event of bad weather perhaps will not hold together for more than a few days.

CHANG-SHA NOW QUIET.

Japanese Consulate Burned—The Damage is Heavy.

PEKING, April 19.—The rioting at Chang-Sha, the capital of Hu-Nan, has ceased. A new Governor of the province is on his way to Chang-Sha, and political complications as a result of the attack upon the property of foreigners are not likely to occur.

The American Legation here believes that all the Americans in the disturbed district escaped to Han-Kow, and the reports to the contrary are generally discredited. The Japanese colony was the last to leave Chang-Sha.

The Japanese Consulate was burned, but the British Consulate, situated outside the city, was not harmed.

The damage caused by the rioters has not been computed as yet, but the total will certainly be large. American property, however, has suffered but a small loss.

Admiral Hubbard Entertains Chinese.

AMOY, April 19.—Rear Admiral Hubbard of the American Asiatic Squadron entertained the Chinese dignitaries here at luncheon to-day on board his flagship the Charleston. The guests were shown through the cruiser and were especially interested in the mechanism of her guns. Lim Nee-kar, a prominent Chinese resident, presented to Admiral Hubbard several beautiful specimens of lacquer.

The Anglian Towed to Port.

LONDON, April 19.—The British steamer Englishman arrived at Queenstown to-day, having in tow the British steamer Anglian. Tugboats will take the Anglian from here to her destination.

The Anglian, which left Boston on April 1 for London, broke her tailshaft when 840 miles west of Fastnet on April 9. She was reported at that time to be in tow of the Englishman, which sailed from Portland, Me., March 31, for Bristol.

DUVEEN FAMILY QUARREL.

Farthing Damages Obtained In Court Against Member of Famous Firm.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 19.—One farthing damages was awarded to-day by the jury in a slander action brought by Jacques Henri Duveen against his cousin, Joseph Duveen, of the famous firm of Duveen Brothers.

Jacques Duveen, whose real name is Handjas, complained that Joseph Duveen had described him as "an unscrupulous scoundrel, not to be trusted." Joseph on the stand to-day denied using this language, but admitted describing the plaintif as ungrateful, and explained how his firm had rendered assistance to that of his cousin.

The witness described how, going to luncheon one day, he had been annoyed to see the name J. M. Duveen up over a shop in Dover Street. Till then he had not known that his cousin was coming to London, his business previously being in Liverpool.

Counsel for the plaintiff, in the first day's proceedings, stated that Joseph Duveen was greatly annoyed when his cousin moved his business to London, and threatened to get his father, the late Sir Joseph Duveen, to cut his cousin out of his will unless he changed the name of his firm, which was then called J. M. Duveen & Son. Originally the business was begun in Holland by the plaintiff's father, Mr. Handjas, who married Miss Duveen. On Handjas's death the widow carried on the business, taking the name of the widow, Handjas-Duveen, it being the custom in Holland for the widow in business to resume her maiden name. Later she married her cousin, and their business then became "J. M. Duveen," until the plaintiff was admitted into partnership, when it was called J. M. Duveen & Son. Some years afterward the plaintiff became the sole owner of the business.

Under examination the plaintiff stated that he always went by the name of Duveen except when he signed legal documents, and then he signed "Handjas."

Evidence was given to show that the late Sir Joseph Duveen had been very kind to his nephew in business dealings and had protested against his nephew opening a shop in London within a few yards of the quarters occupied by the firm of Duveen Brothers.

NEW RECORDS FOR PAULHAN.

170 Miles in Two Days—Five Hours Actual Travel Time for 220 Miles.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 19.—Louis Paulhan has created two new aviation records in two days.

He flew yesterday a distance of 130 miles across country from Chevilly, near Orleans, to Arcis-sur-Aube, continuing on the same machine the voyage begun by Henry Farman, who on Sunday flew fifty miles from Etampes to Chevilly.

To-day M. Paulhan accomplished the concluding stage of the longest journey ever made with an aeroplane by flying forty miles from Arcis-sur-Aube to Chalons-sur-Marne.

The total distance covered by the combined flights of MM. Farman and Paulhan is 220 miles, and the time consumed in actual travel was five hours.

In the last stage M. Paulhan reached a height of 2,000 feet.

Breguet Not Dangerously Hurt.

DOUAI, April 19.—Louis Breguet, the French aviator who fell with his aeroplane from a height of sixty feet yesterday, proves not to have beeen dangerously injured. His skull was not fractured, though he was severely bruised. The accident was due to the collapse of the propeller.

MAGYARS FRANTIC OVER ROOSEVELT

Warmth of the Reception of the ex-President Causes Irritation in Austria.

WILL BE IN PARIS TO-MORROW

Visits Hungarian Government Stock Farm—Count Szechenyi Has a Narrow Escape.

BUDAPEST, April 19.—Col. Roosevelt and Kermit Roosevelt left here to-night by the Orient express for Paris, where they will arrive on Thursday morning. Instead of crossing Switzerland, the route runs through the Austrian Alps and Southern Germany.

Col. Roosevelt's last day in Hungary furnished additional proof of the deep impression his personality has made upon the hearts of the people, high and low. The enthusiasm increased up to the moment of his departure.

Hundreds cheered in front of the hotel when he started this morning for a visit to the Government stock farm at Babolna, where the breeding of Arab horses is carried on, and thousands were massed about the station when he returned at 7 o'clock to-night. The people greeted him with Hungarian cries equivalent to the American "Hurrah for Roosevelt!" which the ex-President, with his ability to grasp the meaning of things, seemed to understand and thoroughly appreciate.

The packed streets echoed the cries as he passed, and this demonstration was thrice repeated later during the evening—in front of the hotel as he departed for the Premier's dinner and on his return, and when he left the hotel finally for the station, where another frantic multitude had waited until midnight to see him off.

The same popular enthusiasm was displayed seventy miles from Budapest, on the drive from the railroad to Babolna. Carriages drawn by six horses, with driyers in picturesque Hungarian costume, conveyed the party through thatch-roofed villages, decorated with crude American flags, under hastily constructed triumphal arches, amid the shouts of the entire population. In each village the schools had been dismissed in order that the children might join in the acclamation of the American visitor.

Mr. Roosevelt hugely enjoyed his visit to the breeding farm. After luncheon, at which the speeches of welcome were most fervid, a score of pure-blood Arab stallions was trotted out for his inspection. The Colonel in charge of the stud, an Arab bearing the euphonious name of El Faalallah el Hedad, who came from Syria as a stableboy, took the greatest pride in showing the fine points of the beautiful animals, saying to Mr. Roosevelt: "I am not married; my wives are in the stable."

The ex-President and the ladies of the party, including the Countess Széchényi, who was Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, fed the horses with sugar from their hands. Later the party visited the brood mares, and Col. Roosevelt saw a tiny thoroughbred which was born to-day. It was a filly, but the Colonel named it "Roosevelt."

There was an inspection also of the blooded cattle, sheep, pigs, and domestic fowl. When the party left Col. El Faallallah asked the ex-President if he were satisfied, and by way of reply Mr. Roosevelt shook him warmly by the hand, saying, "Good-bye, comrade."

The dinner at the Foreign Office to-night was followed by a big reception.

Count Széchényi, who had a narrow escape from serious injury from the whirling blade of an electric fan on the train on the trip to the breeding farm, suffered no ill-effects to-night. The sharp blade fairly grazed his head; another half inch and it would have cleaved the skull.

The Calvinist Bishop of Hungary, speaking at the luncheon at Babolna, referred to Mr. Roosevelt as "the champion of Protestantism."

BABOLNA, April 19.—Mr. Roosevelt and his party, numbering fifty, arrived here this afternoon, and were the guests of Minister of Agriculture Serenyi. They left the train at Aes, making the remainder of the trip in carriages.

On the train Count Széchényi experienced an accident which might have been much more serious than it turned out to be. An electric fan, loosened from its fastening just above the seat occupied by him, fell, and its rapidly revolving wheel just grazed the Count's temple, literally shaving the hair from one side of his head. He was not otherwise injured.

VIENNA, April 19.—Some of the newspapers display considerable irritation over the warmth of Mr. Roosevelt's reception in Hungary.

The Reichspost declares that Hungarian history is entirely opposed to Mr. Roosevelt's speech in Parliament yesterday.

FOR ROOSEVELT'S RETURN.

Not Enough Tugboats to Go Around for Reception on June 18.

Down on the river front it was said yesterday there was an unprecedented demand for ocean-going excursion boats for June 18, when Roosevelt returns from Europe. From what could be learned, a harvest twice as great as that reaped by the various steamboat owners during the Hudson-Fulton Celebration will be garnered on that day. Boats were chartered for the Hudson-Fulton Celebration, it was said, on the basis of $5 a head, according to the capacity of the boat, but for the Roosevelt reception the basis is said to be twice that sum.

Nearly every big organization—patriotic, political, and social—in the city, and scores from other cities, it is understood, have engaged or are trying to engage steamboats for June 18, and though some of the railroads using boats on regular runs will charter them for the celebration, there are far from enough to go around at any price.

Some of the greeting parties plan to go far to sea, and it is expected that there will be a race to be the first to meet Col. Roosevelt's steamer. To locate the Colonel's ship the boats will have to be equipped with wireless and to be speedy enough to keep up with her when she is found. It is expected that many of the boats venturing far to sea will be equipped with wireless expressly for that day.

Some of the organizations planning to meet Col. Roosevelt, it was said yesterday, are negotiating for all sorts of noise-making instruments, such as fog horns and whistles which can be heard at great distances. One organization, more ambitious than the rest, it was said, was trying to get a great sawmill whistle now in use in the Northwest forests which can be heard twenty miles.

Capt. Arthur F. Cosby, Secretary of the Roosevelt Reception Committee, announced yesterday the names of a special sub-committee on the plan and scope of the celebration. It is composed of ex-Judge Gary, Chairman; William Loeb, Jr., Supreme Court Justice Gerard, Ludwig Nissen, and Lewis Nixon.

The plan of the celebration already has been decided, to the extent that there is to be a big naval and land parade, the former as the Colonel's ship comes up the bay and the latter after he lands. Many details are yet to be decided, and as so many organizations all over the country, particularly those with which Col. Roosevelt has at some time in his career been identified, have applied for positions in the line of march on land that much work yet remains to be done. Capt. Cosby thought Judge Gary's committee would report late this week or early next.

While it is not yet known whether any war vessels will come here to take part in the naval parade, there is talk of having Forts Hancock, Wadsworth, and Hamilton salute Col. Roosevelt as he comes up the bay.

Capt. Cosby said the Mayor was being deluged with letters from persons who wished to be put on the General Committee, the number of applications being so great that all had to be denied. It is not yet known here what ship Col. Roosevelt will come on, though the date is certain.

IN DISGRACE OVER ROOSEVELT.

Abbot Janssens Is Said to Have Resigned His Offices.

ROME, April 19.—The Giornale d'Italia says that because of his visit to ex-President Roosevelt in Rome Abbot Lawrence Janssens has resigned all the positions held by him at the headquarters of the church. The paper adds that the Pope has not yet taken any decision with reference to Abbot Janssens, but it is learned that the position of the Benedictine seems untenable.

The Osservatore Romano, the Vatican organ, commenting on the letter of the Papal Nuncio at Vienna to the Vaterland, repeats that the visit of the Nuncio was simply an act of courtesy toward the American Ambassador, while the report that he had instructions from the Vatican and was the bearer of a Papal message is entirely without foundation.

BAKER ADOPTS RULE HE COUNTERMANDED

Uses Excise Instructions He Forced Deputy to Recall, in a Talk to Inspectors.

APOLOGY FOR SCHWANNECKE

From the Mayor for the Bronx Coroner's Arrest by Lieut. McAuliffe —To Reduce 200 Sleuths.

Police Commissioner Baker called his Inspectors from the five boroughs yesterday morning and gave them a heart to heart excise talk. The Commissioner explained in detail just what Mayor Gaynor's views on the troublesome question are and just what he expects them to do under his new interpretation of the law.

The Commissioner read the identical order which Fourth Deputy Commissioner Reynolds issued to the Brooklyn and Queens Inspectors last Saturday and which he, the Commissioner, countermanded the same night when he heard about it on the ground that it was unnecessary and that his previous orders on the subject were clear and explicit enough. Deputy Reynolds appealed to the Mayor in person regarding the Commissioner's action and got a rebuke from his Honor for his pains. That the Mayor at the same time, however, advised Commissioner Baker to repeat the order to all the Inspectors was evident by yesterday's developments.

In his talk yesterday Commissioner Baker said that there were some points which he wished to impress upon the minds of the Inspectors, and which he wanted them to grasp, as the law was not being enforced just as he wanted it. The Commissioner then went on to tell his audience how the bars and barrooms should be exposed, and how the windows and doors should be cleared from obstructions so that a full view of the interior of the room could be had from the outside. He said that there should be no obstruction of any character, and that if there was it should be removed, even if the services of a carpenter were required.

The fact that the Commissioner did not ask Deputy Reynolds or any of the other deputies to be present at the conference caused some comment. This was unusual. The oldest officials about the building couldn't recall an instance when the Inspectors were consulted or lectured without some of the Deputy Commissioners being on hand.

The Commissioner also told the Inspectors that it was the wish of Mayor Gaynor that the present list of 600 plain-clothes men be reduced one-third. The men will be taken off this duty and made to put on uniforms and do patrolling.

Still After the Shirkers.

Mayor Gaynor's request to Commissioner Baker that he catch certain policemen who were in the habit of sleeping in some comfortable corner, instead of being on post bore fruit yesterday when the Commissioner sent to the Mayor the information that Patrolman Max Widmer of the Twenty-ninth Precinct had been caught coming out of Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theatre early on the morning of April 15, after a long watch had been put on him. Charges have been preferred against him, and his dismissal from the force will be recommended.

On information from the Mayor that policemen were also loitering and spending their time in an undertaker's place at 179 Union Street, Brooklyn, a watch was set there and Patrolman Thomas was discovered in the rear room. Charges have been preferred against him and also against Patrolman Thomas Blake, who was found standing for half an hour at the door of the same shop.

Commissioner Baker, Coroner Schwannecke of the Bronx, and Lieut. Timothy J. McAuliffe appeared before the Mayor yesterday morning in accordance with the Mayor's desire to have the incident of the Coroner's arrest by McAuliffe cleared up.

The Coroner said that he was sitting as a Magistrate in the Captain's room of the Alexander Avenue Station on Saturday examining witnesses in the case of Robert Fullem, deceased, when Lieut. McAuliffe told him to get out. When he refused, he said, McAuliffe arrested him. He said he told the policeman that he would complain to Inspector Flood, Commissioner Baker, and the Mayor, whereupon McAuliffe said he didn't care a damn for any of them. He said, according to the Coroner, that he had "got away with" other things and could get away with this, whether they liked it or not.

The Mayor asked McAuliffe if he didn't know that Coroner Schwannecke was a Magistrate, and McAuliffe said he did. He said he arrested the Coroner because he was examining a woman who had a baby in her arms, and he thought the Coroner was talking too loud to the woman.

Mayor Rebukes McAuliffe.

The Mayor replied that he thought it a most extraordinary thing that a policeman should consider that he had the right to go into court and pull a Judge off the bench and put him out. He said he didn't see how anybody on the police force could entertain such a dangerous notion. He told the Coroner that an apology was due him, and that the Mayor and the Police Commissioner, on behalf of the city, did apologize.

"I do not know how high or low you speak in your court," said the Mayor to the Coroner, "but I should think that every one on the police force would know that no policeman has a right to go into your court to regulate your manners or the way of conducting your business. It would be no more or less surprising if this officer had come in here yesterday and put me out of this room, nor would the offense have been any graver."

McAuliffe has already been suspended. He will be brought up on charges.

WAGE ARBITRATION ENDS.

Settlement of the New York Central Dispute in Sight.

The hearings in the arbitration of the demands of the New York Central trainmen and conductors in the office of Assistant General Superintendent Crowley in the New York Central Building, Forty-fifth Street and Lexington Avenue, ended yesterday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. E. E. Clark and P. H. Morrissey, representing the men, said that they hoped to announce the award on Saturday.

At the hearing yesterday A. B. Garretson of the Order of Railroad Conductors gave figures to show that there were roads paying as high wages as the men of the New York Central wanted, in spite of the fact that they are not as favorably situated as to running facilities as the New York Central.

General Manager Smith and President Brown replied on behalf of the New York Central, Mr. Brown reading a long statement. He contended that the New York Central had to contend with competition by water on the Hudson from New York to Albany and on the Erie Canal from Albany to Buffalo, while other roads in the East had no such competition. If the increases offered by the railroad to the company were paid it would mean an increase of about $500,000 annually, while if the increases demanded by the men were allowed it would mean that the company would have to pay about $1,500,000 annually in addition to the present wages.

On the part of the trainmen and conductors it was stated that the water competition of the New York Central would not figure much in comparison with the competition by water of a number of the Western roads which paid the same wages as the Eastern men were asking.

Mr. Clark and Mr. Morrissey will have another dispute to arbitrate while they are here. Grand Master Lee of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen announced yesterday that an agreement had been reached by the trainmen and conductors with the Pittsburg & Lake Erie Railroad, which is in the New York Central system, except in the case of the yardmen. It was agreed to leave the demands of the yardmen to arbitration, the arbitrators to be Mr. Clark and Mr. Morrissey. They will hear both sides in this city to-morrow.

Grand Master Lee said last evening that he and Grand Master Garretson of the conductors had notified Vice Grand Master Sines of the trainmen and Vice Grand Master Shepard of the conductors, who were in Albany, that they had sanctioned the strike vote of the trainmen and conductors of the Delaware & Hudson Company, so that it could go into effect at any time.

"In this case," he said, "the members of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers have voted to strike, and the firemen and engineers have done the same."

The other roads on which the trainmen and conductors have made demands, and which have had no conferences with the Grievance Committees of the men, include the Erie, the Pennsylvania, whose 6 per cent. advance is to be accepted as an installment; the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and the Philadelphia & Reading. Members of the Grievance Committees of the men on some of these roads were in town yesterday.

MRS. CUTTING SUES SON FOR $200,000

Let Robert L. Manage Her Affairs, She Alleges, and He Refused an Accounting.

HE HAS GONE TO EUROPE

Fled to Escape Service, She Asserts—Attachments Served on Companies to Impound His Funds.

Charges of fraud and deceit and an allegation of the embezzlement of $200,000 figure in the complaint of Mrs. Judith Carter Cutting against her son, Robert L. Cutting. On the basis of her moving papers Mrs. Cutting obtained an attachment from Supreme Court Justice Blanchard against the property of her son, who, it is alleged, fled last Saturday to Europe.

Deputy Sheriff Goss served copies of the attachment yesterday on the Colonial Trust Company, the Hanover Safe Deposit Company, the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company, Henry Clews & Co., the Illinois Central Railway Company, and John Monroe & Co., to hold all securities and moneys deposited by young Cutting. A lis pendens was also filed against his property at 241 West 100th Street.

The complaint filed by Charles S. Aronstam of 215 Montague Street, Brooklyn, Mrs. Cutting's attorney, states that in September, 1904, she became the owner of certain stocks, bonds, and other negotiable instruments, and was induced by her son, who is an attorney, to turn over this property to his management.

"By reason of and through the fraud and deceit and false representation of the defendant, her son, that he would take care of and manage the same for her and in her interest and behalf, she was induced to, and did there and then, turn over to him the stocks, bonds, negotiable instruments, and other personal property," the deposition recites.

Mrs. Cutting charges that her son has converted this property, worth more than $200,000, to his own use, and has failed to account for the income and profits.

"The deponent is informed and verily believes that he does not intend to return to the jurisdiction of this court," Mrs. Cutting declares, and charges that his departure was for the purpose of "preventing the recovery of the money and property which he is alleged to have converted to his own use in the complaint herein." In fact, Mrs. Cutting charges that the alleged flight of Saturday was "to avoid the service of the summons and complaint in the suit."

The charge that young Cutting has wrongfully disposed of a large part of the property intrusted to his care is made in the course of the complaint. Mrs. Cutting states that she made several demands on her son during the last year to return the property or the value thereof, and to make an accounting of his management, but that all her demands were refused.

The fraud and deceit charged by Mrs. Cutting consists, she alleges, in her son's procurement of her signature to various papers which, she alleges, facilitated the wrongful disposal of her property. She recites that "having confidence in her son, and in him as her attorney and counselor, in reliance upon the statements and representations made by him she turned over to him the personal property in question for the purposes stated and from time to time she signed and executed certain papers and instruments which her son, the defendant, represented to her were powers of attorney to permit him to carry out the purpose of his agency."

No return was made to the Sheriff's office yesterday which would indicate the amount of money and securities impounded under the attachment. The complaint of Mrs. Cutting charged that her son had either removed or was intending to remove all his property from the jurisdiction of the court. His flight, she alleged, was without notice to any of the family. Young Cutting occupied offices at 5 Nassau Street.

Robert Livingston Cutting, the defendant, married Minnie Seligman, an actress, in 1892, against the wishes of his family, and for this was cut off without a cent in his father's will. He began a contest, which was settled by giving him $300,000 and a life annuity of $4,000.

Mrs. Cutting obtained a divorce in 1895, and in 1897 he married Mrs. Harriet L. Hosley, a young widow. At one time Cutting tried to make a career on the stage, but failed.

NEW ALLY IN WAR ON TUBERCULOSIS

Metropolitan Life Buys Land in Westchester for an Employes' Sanitarium.

LEGAL DIFFICULTIES PAST

Plans for Establishment Complete, Subject to Approval of Local and State Health Boards.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company announced yesterday that it had acquired 225 acres of land at Somers Centre, Westchester County, for its proposed tuberculosis sanitarium. The property consists of the Teed and Allan farms, and is on the Lake Mahopac Branch of the Harlem Division of the New York Central Railroad.

Application will be made at once to the local Health Officer of Westchester County and the President of the State Board of Health for permission to establish the sanitarium. A public hearing will be held May 6 at White Plains, and it is expected that the decision will be favorable to the proposition. Supt. Hotchkiss approved the plan on Jan. 14. His original disapproval had been carried to the courts, and was reversed by the Appellate Division, First Department, in a decision handed down on the last day of 1909.

If the permission of the health authorities is forthcoming, officials of the company expect the sanitarium to be in operation within a year. The plans call for the erection of a central administration building, which will be used for offices and as a dormitory for the resident medical staff. The patients will be housed in portable cottages, which can be bought in the open market and set up as required.

Should the White Plains hearing result in a disagreement or in an unfavorable decision the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company will refer the issue to the State Board of Health and endeavor to obtain a legislative sanction at Albany. The tract which has been purchased occupies one of the highest levels in the State outside the Catskills and Adirondacks. Its pine forestation and its abundance of clear spring water make it an ideal health resort.

The advantages of the sanitarium will be at the disposal of 14,000 employes of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in the United States and Canada. Of these, 3,000 are in the New York district. The Metropolitan's Vice President, Haley Fiske, speaking at a meeting of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents recently, said that his company was ready to expend $100,000 annually for the prevention of tuberculosis. The company distributed last year 3,500,000 copies of a volume entitled "A War Upon Consumption" through its 11,500 agents to every policy holder in the United States and Canada.

The project of erecting a sanitarium by a life insurance company for its employes was first mooted when an anonymous benefactor gave the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company ninety acres of land within fifty miles of New York and $100,000 in cash for this purpose. President John R. Hegeman announced the gift at the annual dinner of the company given at the Hotel Astor Jan. 22. The only condition was that the giver's name be withheld. At that time it was said that the offer had been made because of apparent legal difficulty in the way of the construction and operation of such an enterprise by a life insurance company. The difficulty became apparent in the adverse decision of Supt. Hotchkiss of the State Insurance Department, which was confirmed by the Supreme Court. The Appellate Division, however, refused to uphold Supt. Hotchkiss's interpretation of the insurance laws, and overthrew the decision of the lower court.

At this adjustment the giver of the ninety-acre tract repeated his offer to Mr. Hegeman. He said: "Build your sanitarium and this one, too. You can use them both." But the land was not considered suitable, and only the money gift was accepted.

The decision of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to enter practically into the campaign against tuberculosis won widespread favorable comment at the time the project was announced. It has been suggested that if the new sanitarium camps prove a success other life insurance companies may be induced to undertake similar enterprises and to extend their advantages to include policy holders as well as employes.

MOTHER AND BABY BITTEN.

Bulldog Attacks Both When It Couldn't Reach Child's Puppy.

A brindle bulldog attacked four-year-old Eva Tatlenke of 855 Cleveland Street, Brooklyn, yesterday when the child struck him in the face with her tiny fists and pushed him away when the dog attempted to get at a puppy she held in her arms. The dog turned upon the child, fastening his teeth in her right leg and knocking her down.

Her mother heard her cries, and rushing into the hallway where the child and brute were struggling, grasped the animal by the throat and endeavored to choke him. She in turn was set upon by the animal, which bit her in the hand and wrist.

Harry Rothenberg, owner of the bulldog, pulled him off and Policeman Kiefer of the Liberty Avenue Station killed the dog with a bullet.

HEWITT'S PATENT GRANTED.

After Six Years' Contest He Is Declared Inventor of an Electric Device.

Peter Cooper Hewitt, inventor of the well-known mercury vapor electric lamp which bears his name, grandson of Peter Cooper, and son of the late Mayor Hewitt, has at last won a hard-fought legal battle which has been waged in the Patent Office and the United States courts for six years over the question of priority of invention of another electrical device, perhaps even more important than the lamp.

All the tribunals of the Patent Office and the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia having decided in his favor, the patents for which he applied in 1901 were issued yesterday, declaring him to be the discoverer of a fundamental principle in electrical science, the original inventor of a remarkable static device for transforming alternating currents into direct currents.

The importance of the invention has been generally recognized. The device is an exhausted glass or metal chamber, having at one end a set of simple electrodes for receiving the alternating current, and at the other end a small quantity of mercury, constituting another electrode.

The alternating current passing to the mercury is prevented from going back in the opposite direction by the operation of a natural law, which Mr. Hewitt was the first to utilize. He has designed an apparatus best suited to favor and develop the action of this law so that the apparatus permits the passage of the current only in one direction, and by its action changes the alternating current into a continuous or direct current. There are no moving parts in this invention, which, though extremely simple, is the result of years of study and laboratory experiment.

It acts upon the electrical current as a check valve acts upon a volume of water flowing through a pipe, permitting a flow in one direction only. Popularly it might be known as the "electrical check valve." It has received the technical name of "rectifier."

Its importance can be understood from the fact that this simple little device is expected very largely to supersede the costly, cumbrous machines known as rotary transformers, of which there are many thousands in use, changing hundreds of thousands of electrical horse power from alternating into direct current.

It will enable the alternating current to be used where it has never been used before, because with its aid direct current can be easily and economically obtained from alternating current. Many towns and cities have electric lighting plants operated only by alternating current. Storage batteries for electric vehicles and other purposes cannot be charged with alternating current. The Hewitt rectifier will now enable it to be so used. Moreover, the invention will be of great service on electric railroads which derive their current from alternating distributing systems, and many of which require the current to be transformed into direct current for use on the motors of the cars or locomotives. The saving to a railroad like the New York Central, for instance, would amount to a large sum.

Mr. Hewitt's opponent was the General Electric Company. Mr. Hewitt was supported in his claims by George Westinghouse.

HIS DOWNFALL DUE TO AUTOS.

Realty Man Confesses He Spent $600 in Riding and Gambling.

Gambling and automobile rides caused the downfall of Frederick H. Wrigley of 57 Ashland Place, Brooklyn, who was arrested yesterday, charged with grand larceny. He confessed robbing several persons of sums of money ranging from $15 to $125, while posing as a real estate agent.

Wrigley, who was employed by a realty company at 26 Cortlandt Street, Manhattan, was arrested on complaint of Jacob Hoffman of 208 West 143d Street, manager for the realty company. Many of his transactions involved money belonging to this concern.

Henry Christman of 196 Stanhope Street says that a few weeks ago Wrigley told him he had a purchaser for some property Christman had for sale. Christman promised to give him a commission, advancing him $125 on account.

Christman did not see Wrigley again, and learned that the realty company also would like to see him. When Wrigley was confronted with the charge of grand larceny he owned up to it, and wrote out a list of peculations amounting to $600, which Wrigley said he spent in gambling and automobile riding.

When arraigned before Magistrate Tighe in the Adams Street Court Wrigley was held for the Grand Jury.

SON'S DEATH KILLS MOTHER.

Aged Woman Collapsed While Looking at Him in Coffin.

Mrs. Mary Foy, 80 years old, is dead at her home, 49 North Portland Avenue, Brooklyn, of heart disease, made acute by shock over the death of her son, Thomas, to whom she was devoted. She was stricken beside his coffin in her home on Monday, shortly before the time set for taking the body to St. Edward's Roman Catholic Church.

Mrs. Foy was an invalid, and her son had been in constant attendance on her until he was taken ill with pneumonia last Wednesday. Before his funeral she was assisted from her bed to the coffin, and while looking on his face she collapsed. She was carried to her room, and died an hour later.

Her death caused a change in the arrangements for the burial of her son. After the mass of requiem at the church his remains were placed in a receiving vault, and to-morrow mother and son will be buried together in Holy Cross Cemetery.

ASSAIL TRUST CO. IN STOCK LOAN CASE

Both Prosecutor and Persch's Counsel Denounce the Windsor as a Conspirator.

DEFENDANT'S WIFE IN TEARS

Merely a Dupe in $50,000 Heinze Securities Deal, Declares McIntyre—Plain Steal, Says District Attorney.

Counsel for the people and for the defense in the trial of Donald Persch, as it drew to its close yesterday in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, were of one accord in one thing—the scoring of the Windsor Trust Company for the part it played in the transaction which led to the indictment of Persch, Clark, and Sherwood for grand larceny.

It was at that institution that Matthew M. Joyce on Aug. 2 last pledged $100,000 worth of Heinze copper stock on a fifty-thousand-dollar loan. The securities were immediately sold on the Street, the trust company disclaiming all responsibility, on the ground that it had merely acted as a clearing house for certain lenders who wished to remain unknown to the borrower.

"The most reprehensible part in this transaction was played by the Windsor Trust Company," said John F. McIntyre, in his closing argument for Persch, "a great moneyed institution which aided and abetted the schemes of a crook like Clark. I think the testimony in this trial would justify the Superintendent of Banking in asking the Attorney General to consider the revocation of the charter of an institution that entered into such financial jugglery.

"Mr. Nott has spoken of this deal as a conspiracy. It was such, and the arch-conspirators were the Windsor Trust Company, Walter L. Clark, and L. J. Field."

"I am not at all second to Mr. McIntyre in scoring the conduct of the Windsor Trust Company and its cheap business in taking the $1,500 for the transaction," said Assistant District Attorney Nott. "I do not for a moment believe that its officers knew that Sherwood had no right to the stock which they were leaving in his hands, but, take it at its best, theirs was a pretty slipshod performance."

Mr. McIntyre talked for more than two hours. He derided the District Attorney for catching the small fish and letting the big ones go, and vowed that his own client was but a dupe in the hands of others. To emphasize the unimportance of Persch's role, he described him variously as "this pigmy, this boy, this youngster, this pickayune creature without a dollar to his name, this consummate ass whom I am defending." Persch is over 30, and it is the contention of the prosecution that he had at least $10,000 to his name after the deal went through. Mrs. Persch was in tears before Mr. McIntyre finally took his seat.

Mr. Nott, for the people, was very forceful.

"We have considered one of the most audacious steals ever perpetrated in New York County," he said, "and one which, if it goes unpunished, will absolutely undermine all chances of honest business here. Here we have some men making $44,000 in two days without advancing a single penny. If Persch was a dupe, if he was 'used,' it strikes me he was pretty well used. It was a gang, gentlemen, a gang that divided the swag."

He pointed out to the jury that it was not until Sherwood went upon the stand that the District Attorney's office could do more than suspect the part played by Leonard J. Field. Last Summer Sherwood shielded Field, who was his employer, in all his statements, but on the stand in the Persch trial he said that all that he had done was done with Field's advice and that Field drew $10,000 from the proceeds—his commission for lending $50,000 for two days.

"The District Attorney hopes to land every man in this transaction," said Mr. Nott; "to land the backer, to land the man higher up. You need not worry about that, and if you feel that the way to aid him is to turn this defendant free, you are very much mistaken."

Supreme Court Justice Marcus will charge the jury this morning. Persch, who lives at 533 West 112th Street, is out on $50,000 bail.

CURIOUS BILL OF DAMAGES.

Asks $10,000 for Mental Suffering, Besides 31 Years' Pay.

Some strange figuring of damages in a suit for libel appears in the complaint filed by Lorenzo M. Tribble, who wants $60,000 from the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroad Company, whose agent he was at Bugle, Miss. He charges $10,000 for mental suffering, $2,680 for loss of social and business standing, $22,320 for loss of salary for the thirty-one years he expects to live, and $25,000 smart money.

Tribble charges that letters written by Yazoo Railroad officials prevented his being bonded by the American Surety Company after he had been offered a better position with the Southern Railroad, and that he lost his new position.

Justice Blanchard denied yesterday on technical grounds Tribble's application to make the bonding company produce some of the letters, but added that the communications were not privileged and must be produced when applied for in proper form.

BELLEVUE M. D.'s DISMISSED.

House Surgeon and His Junior Had Talked to Reporters About the Food.

The Trustees of Bellevue and the Allied Hospitals at their regular meeting yesterday dismissed Drs. J. G. McGrath and L. H. Rogers, the house surgeon and junior house surgeon of the Fourth Surgical Ward, from Bellevue. The two surgeons were suspended last week, after they admitted that they had given out information to the newspapers concerning complaints made by the hospital staff about the food served to the members.

The action of the board yesterday was taken on the recommendation of Medical Supt. W. H. Smith, who said it was simply a matter of discipline. He added that Drs. McGrath and Rogers had admitted giving the information to reporters, and that it was done in violation of a rule of the institution.

The medical and surgical staffs feel the dismissals very keenly. They will hold a meeting to-day and decide what action, if any, they will take. For some little time there have been complaints from the Bellevue internes of the food served to them in the hospital. When a story explaining the complaints of the staff was published in the newspapers last week, Dr. Smith started an investigation that led to the suspension and dismissal of the two doctors.

Dr. McGrath's home is in Lowell, Mass., and he is a graduate of the Cornell Medical School. Dr. Rogers's home is in Trenton, N. J. He is a graduate of Bellevue Medical College.

THREE HELD AS PICKPOCKETS.

Arrested on a Sixth Avenue Train—All Said to Have Police Records.

While looking for pickpockets on the uptown platform of the Sixth Avenue elevated line at Thirty-third Street, Detectives Finn and Griffiths of the Central Office last evening saw on an incoming train three men whom they seemed to recognize, clustered around a white-whiskered, prosperous-looking man.

In one of the three, a slight fellow of 18 years, Finn thought he recognized Harry Berman of 228 East Eleventh Street. Berman is known to the police as "The Midget." His number is 22,486 in the Rogues' Gallery, and he has a National reputation for lightness of touch. That touch, according to Finn, was just then straying along the old person's coat.

"The Midget's" two companions, who were elbowing the old man at either side, the detectives believed to be Martin Lewis of 311 East Twenty-fifth Street, whose photograph is No. 3,183 in the gallery, and Samuel Taylor of 2,011 Lexington Avenue, No. 18,956.

The detectives jumped aboard the train as it started, and Finn grabbed "The Midget" and Lewis. Griffiths pushed through the car after Taylor, shouting to the passengers to stop him, and arrested him halfway up the crowded aisle.

Meanwhile, according to Finn, who still held "The Midget" and Lewis, "The Midget" quietly dropped a small pocketbook on the platform. Finn put his foot upon it until Griffiths returned with his prisoner. Then Finn asked the old man whether he had lost anything. The man felt his pockets in surprise; then he grew white.

"I've lost my pocketbook!" he exclaimed. "There was more than $500 in it."

The car had been held up four minutes by this time. The detectives, with their three prisoners and the old man, stepped out upon the platform, where the man, who said he was Harry S. Van Fleet, a printer, of 47 West Twenty-eighth Street, identified the purse which Finn had saved. He said there were five $100 bills and about $50 in smaller denominations in it. All together it was found to contain $560.

The three prisoners were taken to Headquarters, charged with acting in concert in the larceny of $560 from Van Fleet. Berman said he was a clerk; Lewis a salesman, and Taylor a musician.

TEN TONS OF CANDY STOLEN.

Police Startled by the Wholesale Looting of a Factory on Sunday.

The theft from the candy factory of L. N. Hartog at 540 West Fifty-eighth Street of 21,300 pounds of candy, valued at about $6,000, has startled the police of the West Forty-seventh Street Station. Indeed, not until they had convinced themselves by actual inspection did they believe the wholesale carting off of the candy without detection could have been accomplished. It is almost certain that scores of persons took part in the looting of the factory, yet up to last night, when the first arrest in the case was made, only a few pounds of the missing stock had been recovered.

Persons living in the vicinity of the candy factory told detectives that all last Sunday men and women were passing in and out of the door of the candy plant. The theory is that some one forced the basement door, located the candy, and then told others, who joined in the looting.

The police investigation took them last night to the home of Mrs. Mary Gargallo of 541 West Fifty-ninth Street. Three policemen who went there said they succeeded in finding five pails of candy, but were attacked immediately by Mrs. Gargallo and several unidentified Italians. In the fight Patrolman Evans was knocked down by Mrs. Gargallo, and she was arrested charged with assault. Five pails of candy were recovered.

TO SELL INFANT ASYLUM.

Jewish Institution in the Bronx to Move to a New Building.

The Hebrew Infant Asylum of the City of New York obtained permission yesterday from Supreme Court Justice Blanchard to sell its property at Eagle Avenue and 161st Street, the Bronx, to Henry Fischel for $35,000. The sale will not include the office furniture, nor the milk sterilizing apparatus of the institution.

Benno Neuberger, President of the asylum, recited in his application for judicial approval of the sale that the asylum is building a new institution on its property on the Kingsbridge Road, the Bronx. The new structure will cost $310,000. The asylum now accommodates 153 children. There have been opportunities to care for 300 deserving cases, for which the asylum had no room.

There is a mortgage for $125,000 on the property, $66,000 has already been subscribed to the building fund, and there are prospects of raising an additional $100,000 by subscription, said President Neuberger. Some 2,000 members annually contribute $20,000 to the current expenses of the asylum.

FINE NEW AUTOMOBILE CLUB.

A. C. A. Will Mortgage Its Property and Build a New Home.

The Automobile Club of America obtained permission yesterday from Supreme Court Justice Blanchard to mortgage its property, 242 to 250 West Fifty-fifth Street, near Eighth Avenue, for $400,000. Of this amount $100,000 will be used to pay off a previous mortgage and the remainder for a luxurious clubhouse. The application was made through Henry Sanderson, President of the club.

The land on which the clubhouse will be erected cost $183,833. The proposed clubhouse and its equipment will cost, it is estimated, $580,000. The mortgage will be used to protect bonds which will be sold to members of the club.

SHONTS IS OPPOSED IN SUBWAY PLANS

Ready to Compromise with the City, but Interborough Directors Seem Unwilling.

SEES MAYOR GAYNOR AGAIN

Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Board Also There—Work Going Ahead on Rival Lines.

Further effort was made yesterday for the establishment of some understanding between the city and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in the subway situation, but as far as could be learned last night no definite basis of agreement was reached. The Mayor, Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission, and President Shonts of the Interborough held a long conference, but from all indications it was as fruitless in definite results as all their previous meetings.

The Mayor, representing the administration, and the commission, through Mr. Willcox, are known to be in perfect accord, and they are striving with all their power to get from the Interborough, through Mr. Shonts, an exact statement of the improvements which the company is willing to make, with the corresponding concessions to be required of the city.

The presentation of a definite new subway plan has been expected from the Interborough for a long time, and for a while there was indication that it would come at an early date. Nothing has happened, however, and in the meantime preparations for beginning work on the Tri-Borough Subway from the Bronx to Coney Island, on which the Bradley-Gaffney-Steers syndicate a long time ago signified its willingness to bid, have been going on apace until they have reached the point of the announcement by the commission of the dates for the public hearings on the form of contract for construction, equipment, and operation.

Shonts Changes Front.

That there is some significance in the delay none of the parties concerned deny, but just what it is they all refuse to talk about. Mr. Shonts has lately shown a disposition to meet the city authorities and the commission on a common ground of negotiation, and the attitude which he adopted a year ago in fighting the granting of the request of the McAdoo tunnel people to extend their line to the Grand Central Station has disappeared. At that time he declared that nothing should be done by the city in the way of sanctioning further rapid transit routes until a "comprehensive system" could be drawn up and considered. This phrase grew to be a by-word at the subway conferences.

Whether or not the money interests of the Interborough, represented by the Board of Directors, is holding such a curb over Mr. Shonts that he is unable now to come to an understanding with the city, cannot be learned. The feeling between the Interborough Directors and those in control of the McAdoo lines was very strong, it is known, and it is surmised that some powerful influence must be at work now in view of the failure to obtain definite action in face of a change in Mr. Shonts's personal attitude.

It will be remembered that during the squabble over the extension of the McAdoo lines, Walter G. Oakman, the President of the Hudson Companies, the holding company of the system, resigned from the Directorate of the Interborough, and Gardiner M. Lane, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Andrew Freedman, who were Directors in both companies, gave up their seats on the board of the Hudson Companies. This showed the tension of the feeling, and from every indication it has not grown less.

Blocked by Tunnel Dispute.

It would seem that the terms on which the so-called Belmont tunnel under the East River from Forty-second Street to Steinway will be placed in operation is the chief point of contention in the negotiations between the Interborough and the city. The road originally offered to sell the tunnel to the city for the cost price, some $7,500,000. The city retaliated by trying to obtain possession of it for nothing on the ground that it had not been completed in the time fixed in the original franchise granted to the company which built it, and that therefore it reverted to the city. This was fought out in the courts, the Interborough finally winning.

Mayor Gaynor declared on the stump during the campaign last Fall that the city was not right in its contention, and Assemblyman Parker introduced a bill before the Legislature on Monday practically giving the Interborough title to the tunnel in perpetuity. It provides that "if a railroad company has constructed a tunnel and a portion of its railway the franchises are to be vested in the Directors of the corporation or their successors."

The Mayor was asked about this bill yesterday, and he explained that it is merely the enabling act under the decision of the courts. Assemblyman Parker at the same time introduced a bill permitting the adding of an additional track or tracks to existing elevated lines. The Mayor also explained that this is an enabling act to permit such changes in the elevated service as the city may decide to make.

The Interborough's Terms.

The third-tracking of the Second and Third Avenue Elevated lines was one of the proposals of the two transit plans submitted by the Interborough which were rejected by the commission. The first of these provided also for the operation of the Belmont tunnel under a division of the income by which the local five-cent fares alone would go to the city and the through eight-cent fares to the road. This was adjudged unfair and likely to bring about a loss of some $400,000 a year to the city.

The second plan provided also for the purchase of the tunnel, but its operation under a single fare transfer basis. Both plans included the extension of the present Subway south from Times Square under Seventh Avenue and north from Forty-second Street, under Madison Avenue. The last plan was submitted and rejected by the commission last Spring.

The Mayor indicated at a hearing before the Transit Committee of the Board of Estimate two weeks ago that he was in favor of the operation of the tunnel with an extension to Times Square on a single fare transfer basis. He declared that it seemed to him that the Interborough ought to be willing to agree to this, as the transfer feature would bring all the Long Island traffic to it, even if the Broadway-Lexington Avenue subway was operated by a rival company.

But the Interborough wants the city to buy the tunnel, and until some definite settlement of this can be obtained the question of further subway offers from the company will remain in abeyance.

Lindsey and Heney to Speak Here.

Lindsey of the Children's Court at Denver will decliver an address on "The Moral Crisis of the Nation—a Plea for the Children," to-morrow evening, at 8:30 in Carnegie Hall, under the auspices of the League for Political Education. Francis J. Heney, recently District Attorney in San Francisco, will also speak. Elgin R. L. Gould will preside. Among the members of the Honorary Committee are John Harsen Rhoades, Isaac N. Seligman, Prof. John Bates Clark, Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, Prof. Samuel McCune Lindsay, District Attorney Whitman, Charles B. Stover, Dr. Charles F. Aked, and Dr. Stephen S. Wise.

Warrants Issued in Excise Cases.

As a result of the activity on the part of the police Sunday in seeking excise violations twenty-four warrants and twenty-five summonses were issued in the Tombs Court yesterday by Magistrate Barlow. Although an unusual number of complaints were returned to the District Attorney's office on Monday, the number of cases strong enough to reach conviction in Special Sessions are said to be not conspicuously large.

FORT'S SON PAYS AUTO FINES.

Sends a Check for $445 to Cover Collections Made When Register in 1908.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., April 19.—Gov. Fort to-day transmitted to Secretary of State Dickinson the report of State Auditor William E. Drake on the Department of Motor Vehicle Registration, of which J. B. R. Smith, Assistant Secretary of State, is in direct charge. The State Auditor says that so far as the records show the work has been honestly conducted, but that it has not been done in an efficient and businesslike manner.

Coincident with this request Assistant Secretary of State Smith announced that only last Saturday Franklin W. Fort, a son of the Governor, sent to his department a check for $445 for fines for auto violations collected while Mr. Fort was Recorder of East Orange, from which office he resigned in September, 1908. Young Fort says in his letter of transmittal of the funds that he paid them under protest, as the amount exceeded by $45.50 his records. Mr. Fort says that he sent a check a long time ago, that it did not turn up in his bank, and that inquiry of the department elicited the statement that it had never been received.

In his report to the Governor the State Auditor asserts that three keys to the safe are in the hands of different men, and that there has remained in the hands of thirty-five agents of the department from 4 to 6 per cent. on some $245,000 collected last year. The Auditor thinks that such moneys have been used for personal necessities, as the agents deposit the fees to their own bank accounts until their reports are made at Trenton.

State Auditor Drake says:

"The necessity for a complete reorganization of the department and the placing of it under the charge and direction of an officer who would give it personal and undivided attention is manifested clearly."

That there was politics in the whole matter was charged to-day when politicians remembered the standing feud between Auditor Drake and Secretary Dickinson.

As to the assertion that the department has made, without authority, a practice of issuing licenses without remittance, Mr. Smth said the records of his department showed that in only one instance was that done, and that for a car of Gov. Fort. He says that some time after the State Auditor had begun work on his books Gov. Fort sent the remittance to the department for the licenses.

OBEYS NOTE FROM THE DEAD.

Surrogate Quashes Will Contest on Reading Mother's Letter.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., April 19.—A mother's last letter to her two sons, which she directed that they read after her death, played an important part in deciding a will contest in the Surrogates' Court in Delaware County Monday.

Mrs. Polly L. Martin died in East Branch, leaving $60,000 to two sons, William J. Martin of New York and Fletcher W. Martin of East Branch and other relatives. The sons were not satisfied and contested the will, alleging that Mrs. Martin was not of sound mind when she made it.

After reading the mother's letter to her sons Surrogate Grant immediately decided that the deceased was fully competent to make a will and overruled the objections of the sons. The letter reads:

My Dearly Beloved Son Jay: I am writing to you this letter, the last I shall write, and you will be reading it after I am laid away. I wish you to know of my love for you, through all the years growing stronger as I am growing weaker, with a yearning to see you and feel your hand in mine as I draw near to the valley of the shadow of death. I wish you and Fletcher to have the full benefit of all my property, having made the division as seemed best, myself reserving the right to will the principal at the expiration of both your lives.

I am interested in your welfare, both here and hereafter. I am thinking of you and Fletcher continually. I am alone so much I may have only God with me when I am called away, but I feel sure of his promise, and at times I feel quite ready to go.

As I sit here writing I am thinking of your father and Leslie, gone before, and of you and Fletcher to follow, not knowing the future, but hoping and having faith that all will be well. Each night, as I lie down I commit myself to God, not myself alone, but my two sons.

This is all I can do. I need your love and sympathy; keep me in remembrance as your mother. I have so arranged all my affairs that there can be no trouble between you in each receiving his own. God bless you and keep you in safety. With sincere love. YOUR MOTHER.

Mrs. Martin had lived alone for about ten years previous to her death.

CALIFORNIA CLUB LUNCHEON.

There was a golden glow in the Waldorf Apartments of the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday afternoon, where the National California Club in New York was holding its annual luncheon and installation of officers. In honor of the Golden State everything was in yellow, the shades to the candles; every table bore a big bunch of yellow jonquils, and every woman member of the club and guest wore pinned to her gown a big golden California poppy. It was bigger than the original, for it was hand-painted, and held between its petals the programme for the day.

It was a large luncheon, with a full attendance, a programme of music following. The guests of honor were Mrs. Belle de Rivera, President of the City Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Geraldine Bonner, Miss Susan Watkins, and the Rev. Dr. Robert and Mrs. Mackenzie. Only half of the officers are elected each year, and the following is the full list, including those installed yesterday:

President, Mrs. Thomas J. Vivian; First Vice President, Mrs. William R. Stewart; Second Vice President, Mrs. Theodore Roberts; Third Vice President, Mrs. Edward W. LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Cards Composed of Celluloid and Paper Are Dutiable as "Printed Matter."

Articles composed of paper and celluloid on which are printed mottoes were held yesterday by the Board of United States General Appraisers to be entitled to enter this country as "printed matter," with a duty of 25 per cent.

The importation in question was made by Snow's United States Sample Express Company. The merchandise consists of pieces of heavy white paper stitched to pieces of celluloid, the latter being embossed with floral designs in colors and gilt, and having a sentimental motto in gilt letters imprinted by other than lithographic process.

Collector Loeb classified the articles under Paragraph 17 of the tariff of 1897 as articles of which celluloid is the component of chief value. This classification called for an assessment at the rate of 65 cents a pound and 25 per cent. ad valorem. The importers regarded the Collector's assessment as excessive, and a protest was filed claiming duty as "printed matter," with a tax of only 25 per cent. In sustaining the protest General Appraiser Sharretts says:

"Celluloid is a yielding material and is frequently employed in place of paper as a base for printed matter, and in our opinion the material is more definitely provided for in Paragraph 403 of the Tariff act of 1897 than in Paragraph 17 of that act. We accordingly sustain the protest claiming the goods to be dutiable at 25 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 403, the decision of the Collector in assessing duty thereon under Paragraph 17 being reversed."

Miss Freeman's Verdict Set Aside.

Ex-Magistrate Wahle was sorely disappointed yesterday when Supreme Court Justice Erlanger set aside as excessive a verdict of $15,000 brought in by a jury in favor of his client, Blanche B. Freeman, who sued Clifford B. Harmon, a real estate operator, for $22,000 for failure to carry out an alleged agreement to support her for life. The alleged agreement was in consideration, Miss Freeman contended, for the abandonment of an action against Harmon for $100,000 for breach of promise.

CONVICTS' ATTACKS TERRIFY KLEIN

Pittsburg Graft Informer Pleads to be Removed to Another Prison.

FEARS FOR HIS LIFE

Fellow-Convicts Already Have Beaten Him Badly—Swift, First Councilman Tried, Is Convicted.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 19.—"Capt. Johnny" Klein, a ringleader of the Pittsburg grafting Councilmen, has begged his attorneys to apply for his removal to some prison other than the Riverside Penitentiary. Klein declares that a third of his 1,300 fellow-convicts have pledged themselves to kill him bcause he is a "squealer," and that they beat him whenever they get an opportunity.

It developed to-day that there already are a dozen convicts in the dungeons at Riverside for attacks on Klein in the few weeks he has been in the prison. That he has escaped with his life, he says, has been due only to his agility, and the fact that he had been warned that he would be killed by any one of 500 convicts if they got a chance at him. He has been battered badly by the convicts on two occasions, and was in the hospital for days from his wounds. At last the authorities had to lock him in his cell to keep him out of range of fellow-convicts.

Recently Klein has been put to work in the engineer's room of the penitentiary, where only old and trusted convicts are, and where other convicts cannot reach him. It has not been considered safe for Klein to be taken into the big dining room where the convicts eat daily.

The first attack on Klein, which resulted in an open riot at the penitentiary, came within a few days after he had been in prison. Klein, during dinner hour, began to circulate among other convicts trying to make friends. He was taking liberties which none of the older convicts would think of doing and trusted to his "winning smile" to earn a place for him. In less than a minute Klein was at the bottom of a struggling mass of a dozen convicts, each of whom was trying to throttle him or get a kick at him. The riot call was turned in, and after a few minutes the little Councilman was pulled from the mass badly bruised.

Besides being injured Klein was greatly scared. Later one of the convicts tried to get at him with a knife, and it was decided then that the prisoners really meant to kill Klein if the slightest opportunity were given. Then it was that he was locked in his cell night and day for some time.

At present Klein is here as a witness in the graft cases and it is said that when he is needed no longer, an effort will be made to get him into some other prison.

Guilty, as indicted, with a recommendation for extreme mercy from the court, was the verdict returned to-day in the case of ex-Councilman M. L. Swift, Jr., the first of the victims of the graft scandal to be tried on the charge of bribery. The jury was out 1 hour and 45 minutes, after Judge Frazer had spent half an hour in making his charge and explaining the law.

Swift has been on trial for two days, and the chief witness for the Commonwealth was Klein. The verdict becomes a most important one for the prosecution because it indicates whether the District Attorney can rely upon the confession of Klein as the mainstay in the prosecution of the other cases.

Immediately after the Swift case had been disposed of, ex-Councilman A. V. Simon was called, but his counsel pleaded illness of his client and asked for a continuance. Assistant District Attorney Seymour unexpectedly called a physician who said that he had examined Simon at noon and there was no need for him to remain in bed and that he was not seriously ill. Counsel was ordered to produce his client for trial to-morrow morning. Six other Councilmen under indictment will also be called for trial to-morrow.

Southern Pacific Line Moves.

The Southern Pacific Company announces its removal on April 20 to new piers 48 and 49, at the foot of West Eleventh Street. The line's increased traffic, both freight and passenger, called for larger quarters, and the increased facilities will enable the company to give better service. Coincident with the removal the departure of the Antilles today for New Orleans will start a semi-weekly service on Wednesdays and Saturdays from both New York and New Orleans.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1910.

THE DEFEAT OF ALDRIDGE.

The thousand-dollar check to ALDRIDGE would have accounted sufficiently for a majority of a thousand votes against him. The tremendous change from a Republican majority of 10,000 two years ago to 6,000 for a Democratic candidate this year demands other and further explanation. The nature of that explanation is evident. The Thirty-second New York has responded to the Fourteenth Massachusetts, and in both districts the people have given their answer to Winona. The magnitude of the disaster the Republicans have suffered implies something more than a revolt against unclean politics at Albany, something more than a suddenly acquired dislike of the ways of a political boss Monroe County has patiently put up with for twenty years. What the politicians call the ground swell made itself felt in the Congressional election there yesterday, the movement now plainly observable all over the country against the leadership and the organization of the Republican Party, against its acts and many of its policies.

Mr. TAFT could have felt no personal sympathy for the cause represented by ALDRIDGE—quite the reverse, no doubt. But for him the election of HAVENS by this remarkable majority has a significance fully as great as that of the election of Foss in the Fourteenth Massachusetts. The meaning is the same. The people do not at all agree with the President when he says that the Payne-Aldrich tariff is a "good tariff," one of the best we have ever had. They have been unable to agree with his complacent view of the works of the old leaders at Washington, of that stalwart Republican organization just now falling to pieces through the overthrow of CANNON, and the announced retirement of ALDRICH and HALE. There is a new spirit abroad in the Republican Party. It is a spirit that makes it easy for Republicans to accept Mr. WICKERSHAM's invitation to get out of the party and vote with the Democrats. They did that in Mr. Foss's district. By doing that in the Thirty-second New York they have elected Mr. HAVENS. We should say that Mr. TAFT has now abundant evidence that the new course he has given some signs of laying out for himself, a course leading to a near revision of the tariff in keeping with pledges repeatedly given by his party and by himself, is the wisest course, the sure course to win back the confidence of the people in his Administration, the course he ought to take.

It can now be said with some assurance that the investigation into Republican corruption at Albany will go on. Had ALDRIDGE been elected the men of the machine in the Legislature would have turned a defiant front upon Gov. HUGHES; they would have insisted that the people had vindicated the Black Horse Cavalry. Now it is different. Investigation, exposure, expulsion, punishment, and cleaner living have been made compulsory. A Governor may be defied, a band of reformers, however brave, may be derided; there is no safety in defying the people, only destruction. The people have made it very evident where they stand, what they demand, for Monroe County proves itself to be, as everybody hoped, a community typical of the decent citizenship of the State, a community where the wiser Republicanism prevails. Nothing but the extirpation of the old Republican machine can save the State to that party this Fall. Perhaps that will not save it. The old organization has lost its chief men. VEDDER, RAINES, COGGESHALL, NIXON, all are gone. ODELL's power is gone, and ALLDS is put out and disgraced. BARNES and WOODRUFF remain. How long can they stand, what can they do against the tide of popular wrath of which we have a measure in the election held yesterday?

LEADER MERRITT'S BILL.

In the closing days of the Legislature an attempt may be made to "jam through" the Assembly Leader MERRITT's proposed amendment nullifying the Wild Forest Lands provision of the Constitution. Lest we forget the denying language of this provision, it is here reproduced:

> The lands of the State, now owned or hereafter acquired, constituting the Forest Preserve as now fixed by law, shall be forever kept as wild forest lands. They shall not be leased, sold or exchanged, or be taken by any corporation, public or private, nor shall the timber thereon be sold, removed or destroyed.

The Constitutional Convention of 1894 approved this provision unanimously because it distrusted the Legislature. The people distrusted the Legislature because of its record of favoritism that had resulted in the despoiling of the Forest Preserve. Attempts made through the Legislature for the past fifteen years to lower this effective Constitutional bar have met with rebuffs from the people. Another attempt will be rebuffed.

Mr. MERRITT has a personal and financial interest in urging his Water Storage amendment. The State has not yet made it a criminal matter, as the Federal Government has long considered it criminal, to exert such interested influence. But morally it is bad. A legislator, especially one exercising the power which Leader MERRITT has, is prone to identify the public interest with his own interest when he is thus privileged, and, even unconsciously, to serve himself when he should be serving the people according to their desire. Mr. MERRITT will not leave this matter wholly to the decision of the people. He refuses to formulate his specific programme for the invasion of the Forest Preserve, and to have it embodied in a statutory bill, this to be validated later by a reference in the Constitution. He fears that the people would refuse to sanction what he would gain indirectly through the Legislature, therefore he works to have them surrender their discretion in this matter to the Legislature.

He will fail. His bill must pass the Senate after it passes the Assembly. It must then be passed by both Houses at the next session, and at the next general election be submitted to the vote of the people. Grasping for more than they will grant, he will lose that which might be accorded him in the public interest.

CANADIAN RECIPROCITY.

It is a rare stroke of good fortune which puts Canada instead of the United States on the defensive regarding the betterment of the trade relations between the Dominion and ourselves. When the subject was first raised Canada had a grievance regarding the coolness we had shown toward her trade advances. "Never again" was the vow Canadian statesmen had taken regarding approaching the United States and risking another humiliating repulse. Nevertheless President TAFT did induce Canadian spokesmen to exchange hopes for successful negotiations, and the words were hardly spoken before one of the Canadian provinces kicks over the traces and gives the Dominion some explaining and disciplining to do.

Quebec's pulp wood is her own, to do with as she will, no doubt. If Quebec elects to prohibit its exportation it only remains to accommodate ourselves to the situation with what grace we may. It is rather the Dominion than ourselves that is offended by action so contrary to the spirit of friendly commercial professions, so soon discredited on her own side. The Dominion is in position toward us similar to that which we occupied toward Japan when Japan objected to California's treatment of Japanese immigrants. The United States could not control California, and an awkward situation was created to be smoothed over.

It is now Canada's turn to do the explaining which it had been thought it would fall to the United States to do. We are in a position to know how it is ourselves, and to accept the explanations which Canada will proffer at the proper time. The national sentiment in favor of closer commercial relations is national in scope on both sides. No local dissent can block the way on either side.

MR. TAFT AND THE LEADERS.

If the President is in danger of embarrassment from the retirement of Messrs. ALDRICH and HALE, the leader and lieutenant leader of the majority party in the Senate, we venture to say, with all due respect, that he has no one to blame but himself. And he has himself to blame, not for trying to work through the leaders he found in possession of power, but for his surrender to them, for his co-operation in ways of theirs which were far from creditable, and, above all, for his gratuitous, unqualified, and unjustifiable defense of them against the well-founded condemnation of the men of their own party who had remained faithful to the party's pledges while the leaders and the President were disregarding them.

Mr. TAFT started out well. He accepted the obligations of the party to revise the tariff downward. He presented the matter to the extraordinary session of Congress, and gave the country to understand in the first weeks of the long discussion that he would not meddle with the work of Congress, but would leave that branch of the Government to frame its own measure, reserving his constitutional right to veto it if it did not meet his idea of duty to the country. Had he lived up to this understanding, and then vetoed any bill that violated his own clearly stated conception of honorable obligation, there is little doubt that Congress would have complied with his requirements. And the country would have awarded to him the utmost admiration for his courage and fidelity. His course was quite different.

Not only did the President allow himself to be dragged into the schemes of the managers as to this or that provision of the bill, voluntarily taking a responsibility which they were glad to shift to his shoulders, but at the critical moment, when the sway of ALDRICH and HALE was in sore peril on the question of an income tax amendment to the Tariff bill, he became a party to the device of introducing the corporation tax and the proposition for an amendment to the Constitution, and saved the machine. For this device as to corporation taxation there was not the slightest demand in the platform of the Republican Party. It was not so much a revenue provision as a provision for the promotion of inquisition as to corporate affairs, and as such was not pertinent to the matter before the Senate. It was in effect, and, so far as can be judged from the outside, in intent, simply a trick for the advantage of the managers. It welded the fetters in which the managers had succeeded in binding Mr. TAFT.

He was not content with even this uncalled-for committal to the machine. After the bill had been passed and he had, with some show of reluctance, signed it, knowing how far it was from meeting the obligations of his party and his own, he set out on a journey of thousands of miles through the land, proclaiming from Boston to Winona his admiration for the leaders and their wretched work, and denouncing the good men and true who had stood by their pledges. And now the leaders fail him. It is not the retirement of two of them for reasons of health that he really dreads. It is the completion of the revolt against them that has already eliminated their partner in the House and weakened their hold on the Senate. It is the consciousness that he has foolishly and needlessly linked his fortunes with a band of men who are losing and ought to lose the power they have so long and so ruthlessly abused.

But though Mr. TAFT cannot hope to regain completely the strong position he held at the outset, it is not too late for him to take a position much stronger than at present and to begin at least the undoing of the mischief he has done. This he has shown some signs of undertaking. He has asked for money for a tariff commission equal to the task of demonstrating the degree in which the Aldrich tariff departs from the principle of duties equivalent only to the difference in foreign and domestic cost, with reasonable profit. It is a request which Mr. HALE treated last Summer with open contempt and derision. If now the President insists upon it, if he uses the powers he asks for with energy and firmness, if, in a word, he makes himself the faithful champion of true tariff reform and industrial emancipation, he may achieve an honorable reputation and perform a great public service. For this task he need not worry as to leadership of House or Senate. He has only to follow the dictates of plain duty and the American people will take care of leaders and followers in Congress.

COMPARATIVE ART VALUES.

It would seem, indeed, a bad outlook for contemporary American art if the $50,000 received for pictures exhibited at the two latest exhibitions of the National Academy of Design were to be compared with the $1,700,000 paid for the Yerkes pictures week before last. But the comparison would be unfair alike to the painters and the collectors. The works of American painters frequently grow greatly in value after they have ceased to paint. Among the living artists whose twenty-eight pictures in the Spring exhibition brought what seems, by comparison, the beggarly sum of $24,000, there may be more than one whom seven or seven times seven cities will claim when dead. Posthumous fame is desirable and can be made very comforting to one's "heirs and assigns forever." Nobody supposes the enormous prices of "old masters" represent intrinsic values. On the other hand the intrinsic value of a contemporary American picture is often much greater than the price paid for it.

INNESS, MARTIN, WYANT, and McILHENY are painters whose pictures are now eagerly sought and highly prized, and will likely bring higher prices for many years every time they get into the auction room. As for the $24,000, it is a useful sum of money, after all, and our most successful painters do not derive their fortunes largely from the sales of their exhibition pictures. That twenty-eight of the pictures exhibited in the Spring Academy were quickly sold is an encouraging fact. The sales would be better, the encouragement of competent artists stronger, if the Academy could have a permanent home with galleries open the year round. American art is not declining, but the artists are handicapped by bad existing conditions in this neighborhood. All citizens who are interested in the development of national culture should exert what influence they possess to help the Academy of Design to get a well-situated, well-designed, and commodious building.

TEN YEARS OF SOUTHERN SCHOOLS.

At the meeting of the Conference for Education in the South, held in Little Rock, Ark., the veteran President, Mr. ROBERT C. OGDEN, in the course of an address as noble in spirit as it was informing, gave some most interesting facts as to the progress of education in the Southern States for the past decade. This progress has to a considerable degree been stimulated and aided by the work of the organizations with which Mr. OGDEN is connected, but it is to be noted that the larger number of those engaged in these organizations are Southern men, and that the remarkable advance that has taken place has been in the main due to the zealous and effective co-operation of the Southern men officially or otherwise interested in the schools.

The current expenditure for public education in the South has increased two and one-half times in ten years; the value of school property is three times greater; the money spent for teaching teachers is three times greater; High School facilities have been doubled in the cities and multiplied fivefold in the villages and rural districts, and the term of schooling in the rural districts has been advanced by 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. This progress is, of course, continuing, and it is practically certain that its rate will be still greater for the next decade. A particularly significant and encouraging fact is that the increased money and energy devoted to schools are being expended largely for the training in practical work and in the thorough attainment of the elementary branches of education. But the most encouraging thing in the situation is the intelligent and resolute public spirit that is growing up in the South with regard to education. It is bound to have an immense influence in the industrial and commercial as well as in the social evolution of that section.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Respectable Only by Comparison.

Every once in a while there are references to this or that saloon or this or that saloon keeper as "respectable," but definite information as to why either is to be respected or by whom is rarely given. Twice this week, however, we have been told how a vendor of intoxicants can win—which is not quite the same as earning—praise from others than those to whom he sells them.

One Fox, over in Brooklyn, has done this by a strict observance of the excise law, by refusing liquor to anybody already intoxicated, and by making his saloon known as "the three-drink place." This name has been gained, it seems, because nobody is allowed to buy there more than three drinks during a single visit. How widely spaced the visits must be was not stated. It is obvious enough that a saloon conducted along those lines would be better than, or at least not so bad as, those in which the law was more or less violated, but three drinks, if of high potency and taken with sufficient speed, would be enough seriously to disturb the mental and physical equilibrium of not a few men and to start a good many others on an inevitably successful search for other saloons where none except financial limits would be placed on their indulgence. On the whole, therefore, it is hard to see why Mr. Fox should be particularly proud of himself or his business.

Down in Louisville, now, there has just died a saloon keeper with the incongruous name of LARRY GATTO, who had what we consider a better claim to fame. It is not stated that he restricted his patrons to three drinks, but, besides refusing liquor to the intoxicated, he forbade treating in his place, and would not allow anybody there to make the acquaintance of anybody else, with or without an introduction. These two rules were really well devised to prevent excessive drinking, which is rarely done except when an obligation to buy successive rounds of drinks is made and recognized.

The chances are that Mr. GATTO's customers suffered less from the effects of alcohol than do those of Mr. Fox. But, admitting all of their—comparative—merits, it is not clear why either of these saloon keepers should be credited with more than an inclination to limit the extent of their evil doing. With aspirations a little higher, both of them would have abandoned a trade which cannot possibly have any except negative merits—if it can have even those, which is more than doubtful. It is a miserable business and everybody knows it.

He Thinks Dullness Admirable.

One of our correspondents—a man, by the way, whose letters have not infrequently added interest to this page—called attention yesterday to the possibility that people should rejoice, not complain, when they have an opportunity to say, "The papers are dull to-day." We think, ourselves, that "F. T." was wrong in his implied assumption that the papers are saved from dullness only by having a large number of regrettable things to record—as he put it, "crime, fraud, folly, accident, or events more unfavorable to progress than news conducive to serene and satisfying contemplation."

He is, presumably, a believer in the theory that those nations are most happy which have no history, but that is an aphorism of more than dubious accuracy, for stagnation is not happiness for nations any more than for individuals. In the same way, when a newspaper is dull because nothing of any note happened the day before, the phenomenon is much more likely to justify lamentation than rejoicing, for it shows that a lot of things in need of doing had been left undone.

Moreover, "news conducive to serene and satisfying contemplation" may be news of just the sort that "F. T." thinks he does not like to read. When rogues come to judgment or ancient abuses are attacked there is far better reason for serenity and satisfaction than when all is quiet and indifference and toleration prevail. As a matter of fact, it is when the papers are most interesting that affairs are apt to be going best. An apparent exception would be when the papers had to record a great national disaster or humiliation, and yet even then it is better that the record should be made than that it should be concealed, for in knowledge, not in ignorance, lies hope for the future.

As "F. T." said, there are many good people whose names never appear in print because nothing unusual has happened to them, and they have never done anything out of the ordinary. From some points of view they are an admirable, even enviable, part of the community, but they are not the people of great accomplishment nor is the world as much indebted to them as to those who have had the energy to lead and serve it. Moreover, our correspondent should remember that the interest of a newspaper depends almost as much upon how the news of the day is presented as upon the nature of the news. Interest and importance are not interchangeable terms, and the commendable is not always the interesting, by any means.

A Child Allowed to Die.

Up in Stamford the very worst phase of Christian Science has just had striking illustration. A child sick with scarlet fever was allowed to suffer and die without other treatment than the incantations of Eddyite "healers," for, though the case was reported according to law and the house was subjected to quarantine, the mother refused to allow the administration of medicine, and, to the last denied the reality of her little son's illness.

Whether the doctors could have saved the boy or not is, of course, a question, for scarlet fever is one of the most mysterious as well as one of the most terrible of diseases, but they undoubtedly could have given him many more chances of recovery than he had, and had he died nobody would have been to blame. As it is the responsibility is heavy.

Heaviest of all, perhaps, is that of the law and of the local officials who could find no right or excuse under it for effective and timely interference with a mother so lost to reason and whose practices were so dreadfully consistent with her preaching. They could have acted had they possessed courage and efficiency. The power of Boards of Health is almost without limit, and certainly public safety, as well as the life of one boy, was involved in this case.

THE COST OF LIVING.

A Teeming Population Does Not Grow Enough to Eat.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With all of the discussion of the causes that are attributed to the present cost of living there is one prime cause that is the basis of the trouble, production not equal to the consumptive demand. While the increase of gold, the tariff, trusts, and combinations in restraint of trade are more or less contributing factors, inadequate production is the real underlying cause.

New York State has but 600,000 farmers and 8,000,000 consumers, while the producers are steadily growing less. The population of many counties is declining, while there are many farms that may be bought for $10 or less an acre.

While New York City used to get its butter mainly from Orange and Delaware Counties, the supplies are now coming from Texas, Nebraska, Minnesota, and other far distant territory.

During the past Winter eggs were imported from China, while New York consumers are at present eating cabbage shipped from Denmark. Fruits and vegetables are used from land thousands of miles away, which may be produced within from 50 to 100 miles from the city.

While these uneconomic conditions exist a very grave situation is arising that threatens to affect most seriously all owners of land. The balance of trade is turning against the United States, and unless there is a radical change in farming methods we shall soon be an importing instead of an exporting Nation of wheat, and to meet the demands of a growing population meats will have to be obtained from South America and from Australia, which are already coming to our shores, and after paying 2 cents a pound duty and transportation charges are selling from 3 to 4 cents a pound less than our own, and at a profit to the producers.

At the present time American breeders of live stock are receiving heavy orders from these countries for breeding animals with which to increase and to improve their stock. There never was a more favorable opportunity for profitable farming in New York State than now, but a new and more progressive element will have to take up the business. The older generation of farmers is practically down and out. They do not adopt the methods that are required to meet present conditions. Their sons have deserted the land, and efficient labor for the farm is extremely difficult to obtain, with the result that city consumers are obliged to pay the higher cost for food products that are grown and transported over long distances.

Liberal gifts of money are constantly being made to our great universities, which will continue to turn out large numbers of young men whose inevitable future to many can be only that of street car conductors, clerks, and other low-salaried positions, adding to the already large class of dependents rather than of independents. There is urgent need for more agricultural educational opportunity. Large numbers of intelligent young men in cities would go into farming if they had more favorable opportunity to fit themselves properly for the business.

In response to a number of these Columbia has offered to establish on a suitable farm in the eastern part of New York State a branch or department for teaching and training in commercial agriculture that would have immense value. A liberal gift of money to Columbia would enable the university to inaugurate a most valuable and needed work in this direction in the near future.

One of the first results that would follow would be the taking up of the cheap land of the State and supplying a vast population with a greater abundance and cheaper food by a more progressive class of young farmers, and from a near by and unused excellent farming territory.

REJECTED MANUSCRIPTS.

The Experience of a Successful Writer and Its Moral.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I note the letter of Chesterton Todd relative to editors and the return of manuscript. I protest that the said Todd is giving bad advice. The gentleman does not know that he has been complimented. For what reason otherwise than to encourage his literary sprouting would a busy editor write him a personal letter?

"It is rarely," the editor of a noted firm in New York has told me, "that I send other than the form of refusal used by editors." To the fact that I have generally received personal letters I attribute much of my patience in continuing in a profession which is, after all, but a speculation. Four novels refused by one publisher, but refused with kindness and encouragement, giving a business reason therefor, have been taken by other publishers, and one of them is on the market. And the same publisher who refused four or five stories is willing to examine others, with "the hope" that they will suit his individual needs.

To one firm the writer has sent manuscript steadily for three and a half years. Is she discouraged? No. For she feels that her gift is something too deep and serious for discouragement, and fully expects that self-same publisher to come to her in the future. Many writers who give up, cursing the editor, little know of the perseverance in the face of discouragements of the few who succeed. London, Kipling, and many others are fair examples.

THE "CHANTECLER BOW."

Accuses Women of Cruelty in This and Other Fashions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Baynes, in his appeal for the skylark, used in making the "Chantecler bow," errs in giving women credit for any impulse of mercy when a question of personal adornment is concerned. There is nothing more brutal in all the slaughterings of earth than that involved in the quest for heron aigrettes; and snapping the heads and wings off live skylarks is not a tender and gentle process. For both these and a score of other senseless crimes women are responsible.

As a class, they have neither mercy nor consistency. I meet three members of an anti-vivesection society, busy with their propaganda, all three wearing assorted remains of birds, jerked to pieces alive for their adornment.

And these are the creatures who want to vote! Yah! But some women affect me with tedium and weariness.

The First Born.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the article on the supposed inferiority of first-born children appearing in your Sunday edition, April 17, it is stated that Goethe was an only child.

Goethe's father was married in 1743 to Miss Textor, and the marriage was blessed with four children, Goethe himself being the first born, on Aug. 28, 1749; the next child, a daughter, who was born Dec. 7, 1750, frequently referred to in Goethe's writings, was married to his friend Schlosser and died June 8, 1777. Besides these there were two sons, one born in 1752, who died in 1759, and the youngest, born in 1760, who died in the same year.

MAYOR SEIDEL IN OFFICE.

Tells Milwaukee Socialist Council to Care for the Workers.

MILWAUKEE, April 19.—The government of Milwaukee, which for more than a decade, with the exception of two years under Republican rule, has been controlled by Democrats, passed to-day into the hands of the Social Democrats with Mayor Emil Seidel as their leader.

Mayor Seidel will have back of him in the Council twenty-one members of his party. The minority consists of ten Democrats and four Republicans. The Council Chamber was crowded when Mayor Seidel delivered his inaugural address. In it he advised careful action to carry out the promises of the party.

"Before all things, home rule, the right of self-government, should be secured for the City of Milwaukee," he said.

"The workers of our city are its most valuable asset. The Administration should constantly watch over the conditions prevailing in factories, workshops, and places of employment, with regard to sanitation. In contracts to be let by the city the specifications should provide for hours of labor that are not exhausting, that leave a margin of time for rest and development. Such specifications should also provide for sufficiency of light and ventilation; they should prohibit child labor, properly protect woman labor, and prevent the imposition upon workers of degrading conditions.

"Proper action looking toward the establishment of a Bureau of Municipal Research should immediately be taken. The first object of this bureau should be to make a municipal survey, to furnish accurate and adequate knowledge of social, industrial, and economic conditions, leading to specific and practicable plans for city betterment."

He asked for the cleansing of street cars to prevent the spread of contagious disease and demanded an increased number of street cars during busy hours.

The City Hall "housecleaning" of officeholders began to-day with the entrance of the new Administration. Mayor Seidel announced a long list of appointments and other new city officers made known the names of subordinates.

Harry E. Briggs, an instructor in the Milwaukee Trades School, was made Commissioner of Public Works, to supplant the present board of three Commissioners.

Walter P. Stroesser, a tailor, was appointed Commissioner of Public Health, and Joseph Uihlein, a wealthy brewer, was made Commissioner of the Public Debt.

A DAY IN JUNE.

Softly sway the spreading trees
Here beside the river,
Where the gentle Southern breeze
Sets the leaves a-quiver;
Soothing sounds of drowsy June;
Bees and insects humming,
Fill our souls with peace—but soon
Theodore is coming!

Sheltered from the city's hum;
Far from toil and traffic;
Here no carking care shall come;
None but thoughts seraphic
Shall intrude upon our peace—
Yet a strain keeps strumming
In our ears—nor does it cease—
Theodore is coming!

Prone among the grasses sweet,
Blissfully ignoring Troubles (though the price of meat Upward still is soaring)
Here we rest in peace—and yet,
Sounds of distant drumming
Warn us, with a direful threat,
Theodore is coming!

Consolidated Turns It Over for Franchise Tax Arrears; City Pays Up, Too.

BANK KEPT OPEN OVERTIME

Hitch in the Negotiations Delays Its Closing for Two Hours—Suits Now Terminated.

The actual transfer of the checks and warrants between the city and the officials of the Consolidated Gas Company in settlement of their counter claims, the negotiations on which were closed some time ago, was made yesterday in the office of Controller Prendergast at 280 Broadway.

The gas company paid over to the city $7,428,084, and received in return from the city $6,999,686, giving a balance in favor of the city of $428,398.

The counter claims were based on the unpaid franchise taxes owed to the city by the Consolidated and its subsidiary companies, and the lighting bills were due from the city. When the agitation for cheaper gas was started in 1902 the city discontinued the payment of its lighting bills, and the Consolidated consequently stopped paying anything on its franchise taxes.

When the 80-cent gas law was finally passed, fixing the price of municipal lighting at 75 cents per thousand cubic feet, attempts were made to settle up the counter claims. The gas companies had in the meantime gone to court on the question of the valuations on which they were taxed, and the Controller found some difficulty in obtaining a certification of the exact yearly bills of the city for its lighting.

Controller Metz took the matter up in earnest, but was unable to bring about a settlement. When Mayor Gaynor came into office this was one of the first things to which he turned his attention. He called a conference between the officers of the Consolidated and the representatives of the Finance Department, and the Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity, and instructed them to try to arrive at a basis of settlement as soon as possible.

They did this, and the matter was referred to Corporation Counsel Watson. He drew a plan of agreement, which was finally approved by the Mayor, President Cortelyou of the Consolidated, and Controller Prendergast. It was on this basis that the settlement was made yesterday. There is still some disagreement over about $200,000 in interest, and the city therefore withheld $240,000 from the total of its principal until the matter can be settled.

Those representing the city and the gas company gathered in the Controller's office soon after 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. President Cortelyou was present with Robert A. Carter, Secretary of the Consolidated, and some half dozen lawyers and clerks. The city was represented by the Controller, Deputy Controllers Mathewson and Fisher, Daniel Moynahan, Collector of Assessments and Arrears, Receiver of Taxes Austen, and Charles S. Hervey, Chief Statistician of the Department of Finance. There was a delay over the demand of President Cortelyou that the city discontinue its present suits against the Consolidated and subsidiaries for the collection of the arrearages, which was settled after discussion.

The National City Bank, on which both the Consolidated's checks and the city's warrants were drawn, was held open awaiting a settlement. As soon as the transfer was made messengers were hastened to the bank with the papers. It was nearly 5 o'clock before the bank received the checks and warrants and closed.

LOW ORDER OF IMMIGRANTS.

One in Four Undesirable, Says Dr. Wilgus, Some Not Knowing Their Names.

According to Dr. Sidney D. Wilgus, Chairman of the Committee on Immigration of the State Lunacy Commission, one out of every four immigrants is found to be undesirable.

"We cannot hope," said Dr. Wilgus, who read a paper on immigration at the Spring meeting of the commission at the Hotel Manhattan yesterday, "for a desirable race from these immigrants now coming to our shores. Some of the immigrants are so low in the scale of humanity, like the Macedonians and the Slavs from the Carpathian Range, that they don't know their own names. They forget the names of the towns they come from or they do not even know the days of the week or the months of the year.

"There is no adequate manner for inspecting immigrants at present at Ellis Island. Each immigrant is given two minutes for a medical examination and the answering of twenty-two questions that are put to him by the lay Inspector.

"There is no one cure for this evil. The literacy test and the increase in the tax head would aid some, but Congress ought to extend the period of three years in which an immigrant can be adjudged a public charge."

Dr. W. L. Russell was of the opinion that the large insanity rate among the immigrants was due to the conditions forced upon them in America, and particularly in the large cities. The Italians, he said, were the only race free from the taint.

The conference closed with a presentation of a gold watch and chain, four large silver candle sticks, and a silver service to Dr. Adolf Meyer, who will leave the State Lunacy Commission's service next month to take charge of the new psychiatric institute in the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. He will be succeeded by Dr. August Hoch.

FACES FOREIGN DOMINATION.

Chicago Marriage License Clerk Draws Conclusions from Bureau Statistics.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Chicago faces the possibility of being dominated by Poles, Slavs, and Lithuanians, according to Morris Salmonson, clerk of the marriage license department of the County Clerk's office. He bases his opinion on the large percentage of men and women of these nationalities who are applying for licenses.

The unusual rush for licenses in the last few days has called his attention to this phase, and yesterday he said that these three nationalities are furnishing the majority of the big families of Chicago.

"Seventy-five per cent. of the licenses issued in this department are issued to Poles, Slavs, and Lithuanians," said Salmonson.

With Happiness, of Course, Before the Final Curtain Falls.

MR. PEBLE'S PLAY IS MUSHY

But Mabel Taliaferro Is Warmly Welcomed at Belasco's—William Harrigan's Bright Playing.

THE CALL OF THE CRICKET, a comedy in prologue and three acts, by Edward Peple. Belasco Theatre.

Ben Judson.....Joseph Brennan
Buck Edwards.....John Brammall
Joe.....Samuel Forrest
Norman Marsh.....Everett Butterfield
Fannie Marsh.....Lillian Thacher
Mrs. Wrenwood.....Emily Lytton
Rena Colebrook.....Norma Mitchell
Sam Shepherd.....William Harrigan
W. Butler.....George Wright, Jr.
Andy.....George Shelvin
Cynthia.....Helen Lindroth

If Norman Marsh hadn't had such a devil's pride—the words are his, not ours—he would not have proposed to the sweet little cricket five minutes after his catty fiancée had broken her engagement to him. And if he hadn't done that the cricket would have gone back to old Kentucky no doubt,, and forgotten all about him. But he did propose, and his love looked Simon-pure, though three months after marriage he read his newspaper all through dinner, which was a bad sign, of course. And then the catty person dropped in to tell the young wife that the man had married through pique. Being bred in old Kentucky, she held her head high, of course, and gave as good or better than she got, and when Uncle Ben, her old guardian, arrived on a visit, she pretended to be awfully happy, and danced and sang, and chirped just like the cricket that she had been before she was deceived into this hollow mockery of a marriage. All the while, of course, her heart was breaking. And "a wall had risen up between them."

Uncle Ben discovered the "wall" and insisted on taking her back to old Kentucky, where she could be happy—maybe—once again with the horses and the dogs. And the husband asked if he couldn't have one last word with her. When Uncle Ben refused he reminded him that even the prisoner on the gallows has a last chance to save his soul, which was very touching, to be sure. So the little wife thought she would go upstairs a minute to change her hat, or something, and Uncle Ben said he would wait in the library, but "Don't be very long, honey," and she said "All right, honey," she wouldn't, and whenever they said honey you knew for sure they were from the South.

And then her husband told her how sorry he was that she was going to leave him, for wasn't she his little wife, and "couldn't bygones be bygones," or words to that effect, and she said "they couldn't," or something of the sort, and went and stood behind a curtain until he sank into a chair and buried his head in his hands. And then she came and stroked him on the temples, and he looked up very much surprised, and they fell into each other's arms. And the curtain came down; while Uncle Ben presumably went back to old Kentucky all alone, not sorry to get away from a nephew-in-law who always addressed him the way they do butlers on the stage, and never, by any chance, in the familiar family manner.

It was all very mushy and childish, this new play by Edward Peble, with everything happening as it does in the kind of story books young girls used to like to read at boarding school. The up-to-date girl doesn't read that kind any more, which is something to be glad of. And in these days of general sophistication it is scarcely likely that she will go to the theatre to see that kind of play. And when a play gets so far down into the primer class that even matinée girls will not care for it, what need for further comment?

And it was, the general dullness was relieved now and then by the intrusion of the one character that had any resemblance to reality, a breezy, up-to-date young man, with enough of the philosophy of life to know that "though money isn't happiness it goes a long way toward making unhappiness less unhappy." And even he came into prosperity through one of those sudden chance discoveries which do not often happen out of plays and azure-backed noveletttes.

The actors took it all very seriously, indeed, which made one wonder whether actors really have a sense of humor.

Miss Mabel Taliaferro, exquisitely dainty as usual and looking very charming, in red, in three lovely changes of frocks, was received with great warmth by a large and friendly house. She played the title heroine so prettily at times that one almost forgot the little creature's silliness. Not always, however, for the cricket is quite emotional in spots, and Miss Taliaferro is rather frail for that sort of thing, which should cause no regrets whatsoever. She is best in the more vivacious passages, though she would be better always if she could be induced to eliminate a whimpering tone which creeps into her voice much too often to be pleasant.

The best role in the play—that of the breezy youngster referred to—was delightfully played by William Harrigan, who, in addition to showing that he is a chip of the old Harrigan block, is rapidly developing into an exceptionally good comedian. He improves right along, which makes one glad to see that his opportunities are correspondingly improved.

The proud and catty person was very proudly and cattily played, as, indeed, she should be, by Miss Norma Mitchell, while Mr. Joseph Brennan, though no more Kentuckian than his little protégé, was, as generally, sympathetically engaged. Mr. Everett Butterfield, Miss Emily Lytton, and Miss Lillian Thacher were as human as circumstances allowed.

But "The Call of the Cricket," it is to be feared, will be rather a faint chirp.

EJECT NEGRO FROM THEATRE.

J. J. Davis, Put Out of Victoria Orchestra, Causes Usher's Arrest.

George F. Knox, head usher at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Lieut. Ennis of the West Side Court on a warrant issued by Magistrate Butts on the complaint of James J. Davis, a negro, of 41 West 133d Street. Davis charged that he was prevented from occupying two orchestra seats purchased by his wife at the box office of the Victoria Theatre for the performance of the night of March 10. He alleges that he was forcibly ejected from the theatre by Knox, who is also a negro, when he refused to accept two seats in the balcony in exchange for his orchestra chairs.

The arrest was ordered upon an alleged violation of Section 514 of the Penal Code which makes it a misdemeanor for any person to exclude from full enjoyment of an inn, tavern, restaurant, public conveyance, theatre, or other place of amusement a citizen by reason of race or color.

FOR THE TABLE.

A housekeeper who lives a little out of town is giving luncheons with violet table decorations. For the centre piece she has a few fresh wild violet plants growing and picks quantities of violet blossoms and candies them. She serves them in tiny green bon bon dishes and a few fresh violets float on the water in the finger bowls. Delicate green decorated china is used.

Strawberries can be found in some of the higher-priced shops for as little as 35 cents a basket and are less in other places. A pretty salad is made of strawberries. It is served individually, a little pyramid of strawberries placed on nests of lettuce leaves taken from the heart of the lettuce. The berries are lightly sprinkled with sugar, a teaspoonful of mayonnaise tops each pyramid of berries and a cut lemon is served with them.

A cheese sauce is delicious with many things. To make it four tablespoonsful of grated and melted cheese are added to every cupful of white sauce.

A French way of serving string or butter beans is to drain them after they have been boiled tender and then heat in a little butter. A second day's service is good in this way, and when there are different vegetables left they may be added to cold potatoes cut into dice and the whole—peas, beans, and potatoes—may be heated and browned in a little butter.

A pretty effect in finishing small cakes or for a child's birthday cake is to scatter over the top while the frosting is fresh a few candied rose leaves or violets.

BRADY AND SHUBERTS IN $1,000,000 DEAL

Corporation Formed to Build Two Theatres in Times Square and in Other Cities.

TO FIGHT FOR "OPEN DOOR"

Company to Test New Laws in Missouri and Texas Where Independents Have Been Barred.

Persistent rumors that William A. Brady would "switch" from the Theatrical Syndicate to the Shuberts were confirmed yesterday by the filing of articles of incorporation at Trenton, N. J., of a company to be known as William A. Brady, Incorporated. The company has a capital stock of $1,000,000, and the officers named are: William A. Brady, President; Lee Shubert, Vice President, and J. J. Shubert, Secretary and Treasurer.

In an announcement made last night it was stated that Mr. Brady's present productions, and those he controls in partnership with Joseph R. Grismer, would remain independent of the new company. The present attractions include Grace George, Robert Mantell, Nat C. Goodwin, Louis Mann, Otis Harlan, Wright Lorimer, "The Balkan Princess," to be produced next season; "Way Down East," "Mother," a new play by Jules Eckert Goodman, now running in Chicago; Thomas A. Wise, Douglas Fairbanks, "A Gentleman from Mississippi," "The Man of the Hour," and several attractions soon to be produced.

Mr. Brady said last night:

"My arrangement with the Shuberts affords me opportunities I never had before. It gives me a chance to do things in the producing line that I have always earnestly wished for.

"One of the first things that this new corporation will do is to immediately organize the largest theatrical plant in the world with facilities to take a play in the manuscript and turn it out a finished stage product. Artists, stage directors, and all others necessary to the production of a play will be housed in one building. A special feature will be to encourage American dramatists. Among the authors whose plays have already been contracted for by this company are George Broadhurst, Thompson Buchanan, Jules Eckert Goodman, Frederick Lonsdale, John Corbin, Justin Huntly McCarthy, James Fagan, and John C. Ritter.

"Our plans embrace the building of two theatres in Times Square, on sites already selected. One will be called the New Netherlands and the other the Edwin Booth. The new theatre, the Playhouse, now building in Forty-eighth Street, will be under my personal control. We shall also build new theatres in Boston, Chicago, and Philadelphia. Oscar Hammerstein is considering a proposition made to him before sailing for us to provide him with big productions of melodrama for the Manhattan Opera House during the period when the house is not being used for grand opera performances. These productions will be of American locale, but will be like the productions at the Drury Lane, London.

"I propose to enlist my active services as well as those of the new company to aid the Shuberts in bringing about the 'open door' policy throughout the United States. My attractions will hereafter be booked with the Sam S. Shubert booking agency, but there is nothing in my agreement that prevents my playing in any city or in any theatre where the 'open door' policy prevails.

"I shall offer my attractions to the theatres in Texas and Missouri, which are at present shut to independent producers, and on their refusal to book my plays I shall avail myself of the laws recently enacted in those States, and shall take the matter into the courts, even if a test must be made in the United States Supreme Court. Our future purposes shall look to the introduction of similar laws in the State Legislatures throughout the country."

TROUBLE IN A WOMAN'S CLUB.

One Member Declines Office and Another Talks of the Law.

Trouble that has been fomenting for several months in the Civic Club, which is composed of the best-known women of Newark, N. J., got into the limelight yesterday, when Mrs. C. Howard Vanderpool resigned as Recording Secretary within a few minutes after her election.

Mrs. Harry Campton of 2 Lombardy Street, Newark, at whose residence the meeting was held, was elected President of the club. It is intimated by her opponents that the selections of the Nominating Committee made two months ago were passed over, and that Mrs. Campton was elevated to the Presidency with the aid of ten new members she caused to be elected to the club.

Mrs. Vanderpool was elected Recording Secretary at the same meeting, but was not present. She declined to serve, she said, because she considered the election of all the officers irregular.

"For the last two months we have been dissatisfied with the methods of some of the members," said Mrs. Vanderpool yesterday. "I knew nothing of my election until notified by telephone. Then I resigned. I don't agree with Mrs. Campton's methods."

The slate made by the Nominating Committee was not formally presented. Because of the withdrawals from the ticket Mrs. James Corlis, the retiring President, announced that the nominations would be received from the floor. Because of certain things said by Mrs. Campton Mrs. De Forest P. Lozier, the former President, threatened to resign from the club and left the meeting room in indignation, remarking that Mrs. Campton would hear from her again through her lawyer.

PITTSBURG SHUTS LIBRARIES.

Appropriation Will Keep Carnegie Institutions Open Only Half Time.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 19.—The Carnegie Central Library and seven branches in various sections of the city will be open only half time after May 1. This is made necessary because the city failed to appropriate enough money to maintain the system.

This step was decided at a meeting of the Library Committee of the Carnegie Trustees to-night. A subcommittee report recites that Mayor Magee cut the original appropriation of $290,000 to $225,000 in the face of the opening of a new quarter of a million dollar branch given by Andrew Carnegie at the request of Councils.

It is expected that a number of employes will be dismissed.

CALL RICH MAN INCENDIARY.

Clarke, Acquitted Once, Tried Now on New Charge of Boys.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 19.—For the second time Robert R. Clarke, a wealthy resident of Rhinebeck, was placed on trial to-day under indictments growing out of charges made against him by several village boys who accuse him of having burglarized and burned homes at night, resuming his character of a country gentleman by day. The statements of the boys were discredited on Clarke's first trial for burglary, when he was acquitted.

The indictment under which Clarke is being tried now is for arson. He is charged with setting fire to the costly Huntington mansion, which was burned to the ground several months ago.

Attorney John F. Ringwood asked the court to discharge Clarke on the ground that all six indictments against him were found on information given by alleged accomplices, and that the boys who testified before the Grand Jury on several occasions were sworn only once. The motion was denied.

Clarke denies that he had any knowledge of the Huntington fire.

CHARLES STEVENS, former Prince of a tribe of Zulu warriors living along the Zambesi River, South Africa, is dead in Chicago. He was 65 years old. His real name probably never will be known. He was brought to the United States more than thirty-five years ago by Charles Stevens of Joliet, an amateur explorer. While traveling along the Zambesi River Mr. Stevens's boat overturned. He was rescued by a powerful Zulu warrior. Mr. Stevens brought his rescuer to the United States with him. In some way they separated and the Zulu adopted the name of Stevens.

NURSE ACCUSES DR. HYDE.

Says He Predicted Col. Swope Never Would Return to Home.

KANSAS CITY, April 19.—"Col. Swope will never return to Kansas City," said Dr. B. C. Hyde, shortly before Mr. Swope's death, according to Miss Pearl Keller, a nurse, who testified to-day in the trial of Dr. Hyde for the murder of Co'. Swope. Miss Keller was attending Col. Swope at Independence, Mo., at that time.

Dr. Hyde's remark, said Miss Keller, followed one by her informing the physician that Col. Swope planned to return to his home in Kansas City in a few days. Her patient at that time, testified the nurse, was in better physical condition than he had been for weeks. He was able to take daily drives, and seemed in good spirits, she said.

Miss Keller was the first important witness called by the State after Frank P. Walsh delivered the opening statement for the defense, which occupied the entire morning session. His address contained many rebukes for Mrs. Logan O. Swope, charges of trickery against the chemists who were employed to make the analysis of the viscera of Thomas H. and Christian Swope, and a prediction that the defense would be able to disprove every charge made against Dr. Hyde by the State.

The courtroom was crowded to-day. Two hundred persons brought their luncheons, and at the noon recess of two hours remained in their seats that they might hear the afternoon proceedings.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

CANADIAN BOY WINS BOSTON ROAD RACE

Fred L. Cameron Leads Big Field —Three New Yorkers Well Placed.

BOSTON, April 19.—Fred L. Cameron of Amherst, N. S., and half a dozen fellow-Canadian runners, captured most of the honors in the Boston Athletic Association's fourteenth annual road race to-day, over the twenty-five miles of State road from Ashland to this city. While no records were broken, Cameron's time of 2 hour 28 minutes 52 3-5 seconds was the third best time made in this event and was only four minutes and twenty-eight seconds behind the record made by Tom Longboat, the Indian, three years ago.

With the exception of a mile or two early in the race, the little Amherst runner never saw the heels of a competitor, and gained the honor of being the first winner of a Boston "marathon" run to set the pace, practically from start to finish.

That Clarence H. E. De Mar, an 18-year-old runner of the Dorchester District of Boston, was second, was due to his stamina in beating out James J. Corkery of Toronto, in the last three miles. John R. Roe, another of the Toronto team, was fourth, while R. E. McCormack of Toronto came in seventh, Charles Cook of Hamilton, Ontario, was sixteenth; John G. Near of Toronto was seventeenth, and Gordon W. Wolfe of Dartmouth, N. S., finished nineteenth, giving seven placed men in the team of thirteen Canadians who started.

It was a hard day for the "old guard," for of those who have been factors in former races, only James J. Piggott of Cambridge and William W. Wiseman of South Boston finished among the first twenty to-day.

A night's rain and a warm forenoon sun made the going perfect, while a light southerly breeze at the start helped along for the first few miles, and a salt air from the sea refreshed the exhausted runners as they came over the brow of the reservoir hill. It was estimated that 200,000 people lined the long road and encouraged the runners as they sped by.

The clocks were striking the noon hour when the runners started. Cameron ran a well-planned race throughout. After he had shaken loose from the crowd on getting out of Ashland, with D. Sheridan, another Toronto man, as pacemaker, the field was rapidly dropped. Fifty yards behind came four more Canadians—James J. Corkery, Charles Cook, Bernard Buxton, and John R. Roe.

On the run to Natick, eight miles from the start, Sheridan dropped behind. From that time Cameron's company consisted of his bicycle attendant and more than a score of automobiles. Corkery held tenaciously to second place, but young De Mar, with his long stride, worked up steadily, and a mile beyond the reservoir he romped by Corkery.

At Coolidge Corner, three miles from the finish, there was two minutes between the two leaders. The crowd was wild with excitement. Panting and weary, the plucky runners hastened along Beacon Street and Commonwealth Avenue, on the home stretch. Cameron had the speed and endurance to maintain his advantage. When he swung around the corner into Exeter Street, he spurted ahead and broke the red yarn of the finish line opposite the Boston Athletic Association Clubhouse amid a tumult of cheers. Shouting had not ceased when De Mar, a minute later, crossed the line. There was an interval of five minutes before Corkery staggering along and encouraged by his friends almost fell across the finish line in third place. The rest of the field was well strung out, but nearly all were in good condition.

The race to-day was the fourth Marathon that has been won by a Canadian runner. J. J. Caffrey of Hamilton, Ontario, was the victor in 1900 and 1901, while Tom Longboat, the Indian runner, also of Hamilton, established the record of 2:24:24 for the course.

Fred Cameron's Marathon to-day was his first twenty-five-mile race. He had gained many honors at the ten-mile distance, winning the Nova Scotian ten-mile championship last Thanksgiving, and establishing a new Canadian amateur record of 54 minutes 46 seconds. He is only 5 feet 8½ inches in height, and weighs but 127 pounds.

The times of the first ten men were as follows:

	H. M. S.
Fred L. Cameron, Amherst, N. S.	2:28:52 3-5
Clarence H. De Mar, Boston	2:29:52 3-5
James J. Corkery, Toronto	2:34:25 4-5
John R. Roe, Toronto	2:38:08 2-5
M. J. Ryan, New York	2:38:42 1-5
John J. Reynolds, Jersey City	2:40:09 3-5
R. E. McCormack, Toronto	2:40:25
Edwin A. White, New York	2:40:50 2-5
F. H. Devlin, New York	2:41:34 2-5
James Cleary, Cherry Valley, Mass.	2:44:58 4-5

MOTOR BOAT RACE COURSE.

Neither Huntington Nor Larchmont Has Been Decided On.

Neither Larchmont nor Huntington Harbors has as yet been decided upon as the course for the British International Cup race of 1910, according to Secretary E. S. Forsdick of the Automobile Club of America, of which the Motor Boat Club of America, present holder of the trophy, is the power boat section. Mr. Forsdick said yesterday that any statements that Huntington Harbor would have the contest were premature, unauthorized, and from several viewpoints entirely erroneous; that Larchmont would have it was a matter still in abeyance.

"In the first place there seems to be a peculiarly strong desire on the part of certain individuals to have Huntington Harbor named as the scene of the race," said Mr. Fosdick yesterday. "Just why they are so anxious for Huntington has not yet been shown, but the Motor Boat Committee of the Automobile Club—composed of two members of that organization, two of the Motor Boat Club of America, and two of the Larchmont Yacht Club—is not going to bite on anything like that for a while at least.

It seems to the Joint Regatta Committee that the choice of a course should depend upon more than whim or the personal desire of two or three men unsupported by other good and valid reasons. Other than in that way Huntington Harbor has had no advocates."

WESTON HELPS PLANT TREE.

Mayor of Batavia Presents Pedestrian with Gold Badge—Walks in Cold Rain.

BATAVIA, N. Y., Apriy 19.—Edward Payson Weston arrived here at 7:15 P. M. The entire route from Buffalo, from near which city he started his walk to-day, was in the face of a driving cold rain, turning at times to snow. Weston was very tired, but he insisted upon carrying out the programme arranged for him here.

At the Land Office he turned a spadeful of earth upon the roots of a memorial tree, after which Mayor Atchison presented the veteran pedestrian a gold badge bearing his name and the dates of his four visits to Batavia. He retired shortly after 8 o'clock, leaving orders to be called at 2 A. M., when he will start for Rochester.

NOTES FOR THE GOLFERS.

Jerome D. Travers of Montclair and Fred Herreshoff of Garden City have entered for the invitation tournament at the Country Club at Lakewood, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week. The affair will have its usual large field, and the fact that four sixteens have been provided for makes it certain that a goodly number of the starters will be kept busy throughout.

There is a pretty general feeling in the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association that the next championship tournament should be held in the Summer instead of the Fall. It is understood that a July date will be chosen when the organization has its meeting in May. While no course has as yet been selected, the probabilities are that some club in the metropolitan district will secure the attraction.

Preparations are making by the Fox Hills Golf Club for an extra heavy entry for its invitation Spring tournament, May 12, 13, and 14. Those who have played there recently say the course never appeared in better turf.

There will be no Spring tournament at the Nassau Country Club this year, but a Fall date will undoubtedly be announced a little later. Play to the short pond hole has been made more exacting because of the erection of mounds on two sides of the green. The fifth and seventh greens have also been made undulating.

MORE RAIN; NO BASEBALL.

Giants and Superbas Again Prevented from Playing Opening Games at Home.

Lord Kitchener of Khartoum and about 12,000 baseball fans watched an April shower make the grass grow at the Polo Grounds yesterday. For the second time the first act of the big baseball show between the Giants and the Bostons had to be postponed.

About 2 o'clock the sun squeezed its way through the clouds and was on exhibition just long enough to entice the populace away from home and work and hurry to the Polo Grounds. Then when more than 10,000 of them had picked out good seats and were ready to give their throats the first severe strain of the season, the sun beat a retreat. The next scene shows the rain pelting down on the new white uniforms of the Giants, and they soon hurried to the clubhouse. So did Boston. Manager McGraw is laid up with a bad cold, and Fred Tenney was in command yesterday.

Perhaps it is the new mascot that is the Giants' hoodoo this season. Some one presented the team with a Billiken, life size. Yesterday when the teams were warming up the Billiken was placed in front of the Giants' bench. It started to rain soon after he took his position. Some one put a catcher's mask on the mascot and it rained all the harder. Billiken didn't mind the rain, for the only thing he wore was a part in his hair.

At 3 o'clock it was raining hard and the base paths got muddy. The crowd still had hopes that the game would be played and stuck to their seats. Shortly after 3:30 the game was declared off and the Bostons and the Giants will assemble again to-day and try to play, weather being agreeable. The rain made the grass greener, and the crowd sat around for a long while and admired the scenery and the fresh paint. The band was driven out of the rain and entertained the crowd in the stands. Lord Kitchener got a rain check, which he will probably take back to England with him. Mayor Gaynor heard about the rain and did not go up to Coogan's Hollow. He and the 12,000 other fans were deeply disappointed. It was no way for the weather to act.

Washington Park in Brooklyn was in the storm belt, too, and thousands of fans over there were very much put out because the game between the Dodgers and the Phillies was prevented. There was nothing to do but send the folks home and tell them to come around again to-day. This Mr. Ebbets did.

GLIDDEN CAR STALLS.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 19.—After a night spent in a squatter's cabin in Yellow River bottom, fifty miles south of Sheffield, Ala., the Glidden pathfinding party made Grand Junction, fifty-three miles east of here, late to-night, and will arrived in Memphis early to-morrow. This region has been visited by two rainstorms unparalleled in the weather bureau's history since 1884, and the swamp lands in Mississippi are a sea of clay mud in which an automobile sinks until the wheels disappear. A double yoke of oxen was required to pull the Chalmers "thirty" from a hole a few miles from Burnsville, Miss., last night, and several hours of wallowing caused the explorers to seek refuge in a two-room shanty where they were treated to a meal of boiled pork and corn bread.

Dal H. Lewis, scout of the American Automobile Association, is confident that the roads which are now well-nigh impassable will supply good running for the tour contestants in June.

A delegation of automobile enthusiasts from Helena, Ark., arrived in Memphis to-night to pilot the pathfinder into that State. The eighty miles of road between this city and Helena are in excellent shape.

Sunday Baseball in Columbus.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 19.—Gov. Harmon has told representative supporters of the Anderson local option Sunday baseball law in Columbus that he will sign the bill in a day or two in spite of the protests being put up against it by pastors and church people throughout the State. He says if the voters want baseball on Sundays the clubs there will have the right to play, and that he considers among other things the fact that in every community there are thousands of people who cannot attend games on any day except Sunday.

Kling to Appear in Vaudeville.

CHICAGO, April 19.—John Kling, the catcher of the Chicago National League baseball team, has devised a unique way of paying the $700 fine imposed by the National Commission for his reinstatement. Kling is advertised to appear at the American Music Hall here next week in a vaudeville act, and the money he receives for the turn will go to pay the fine.

Meier to Coach Princeton Nine.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 19.—A. E. Meier of St. Louis, it was announced to-day, will succeed William J. Clarke, manager of the Albany, N. Y., State League Baseball Club, as coach of the Princeton team. Meier is a graduate of the Princeton 1902 class and played with the Pittsburg team in 1907. Clarke had been engaged as Princeton coach only until the opening of the New York State League season.

Chance Fines Two Young Cubs.

ST. LOUIS, April 19.—Manager Chance is not going to have his ball players dubbed comets because of their erratic midnight wanderings. To show that he means business, Chance has assessed Floyd Kroh $100 and suspended him for two weeks and has fined Heine Zimmerman $100. Despite repeated warnings, these two players have seen fit to do about as they please.

Syracuse, 5; Rochester, 3.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 19.—The Syracuse University baseball team defeated Rochester University to-day, 5 to 3.

St. Ignatius Boys' Club Games.

Over 800 of the best athletes in the Catholic Athletic League have entered the fifth annual games of the Boys' Athletic Club of St. Ignatius Loyola's Church, to be held in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory Thursday night. The C. A. L. ranks with the P. S. A. L. as a breeder of young athletes, and many of the youngsters now competing will later on be running for the larger athletic clubs. The half-mile handicap has drawn a particularly good field and promises to be one of the best races of the year at the distance, though naturally the time will be slower than if such men as Sheppard and Gissing were competing. The junior relay for boys of the C. A. L. and parochial schools is arousing all kinds of interest in Catholic athletic circles.

RECORD BASEBALL CROWD IN BOSTON

30,000 Fans Break Police Lines on the American League Grounds.

BOSTON, April 19.—Attended by the usual flag raising ceremony and the pitching of the first ball into play by Mayor John F. Fitzgerald the American League baseball season in this city was opened to-day, and celebrated by the home team with a victory over Washington by a score of 2 to 1. The grounds had been well dried by the sun, and the game was fast and snappy throughout. Nearly 15,000 persons were present.

Exactly seven persons more than 30,000, the largest crowd ever at a ball game in this city, saw Boston defeat Washington 5 to 4 in an exciting contest this afternoon. This was Patriots' Day, a State holiday. The visitors were two runs ahead when Boston went to bat in the ninth inning, but a base on balls and three successive hits gave the locals the game.

The immense crowd was beyond control of the police, and repeatedly closed in on the field so far that the game was greatly delayed. The socres:

GARAGE OWNERS ORGANIZE.

Plan General Reform in Management —Bad Chauffeurs to Go.

The garage owners of the city held a meeting at Reisenweber's, Fifty-eighth Street and Eighth Avenue, yesterday, to effect an organization to promote the best interests of this phase of the automobile business. Heretofore there has been no concerted action among garage owners, and it has been almost impossible to effect any general reform which would be for the best interests of both garage owner and automobilists. The bringing together of all the garages in one organization will do much to keep out objectionable operators of cars and prevent much of the thieving which goes on from time to time. Other reforms which the organization will be able to bring about are numerous.

Charles A. Singer of the Knickerbocker Garage and the Palmer & Singer Manufacturing Company acted as Temporary Chairman, and the different representatives freely discussed the many reforms which the organization could effect. It was decided to form an association of garage owners, and another meeting will be held on April 26. The movement has interested the majority of the men in the garage business in the city, and among those who were present at yesterday's meeting were:

S. P. Bowman, Bowman Auto Company; I. D. Siegal, Taxicab Auto Company; D. L. Dean, Uptown Garage; W. D. Carleton, Co-Operative Garage; E. H. Fritchman, Metropolitan Garage; M. Segall, Apthorp Garage; M. Willett, Lincoln Square Garage; E. H. Minder, Mutual Cab Company; D. Brohacher, Melrose Garage; E. Van Baerle, Waldorf Garage; James Larkin, New York Auto Garage Company; M. H. Andrus and E. J. Harlem, Sagamore Garage; H. F. Weston, Riverview Garage; T. G. Gorvan, Gorvan's Garage; B. L. Topliz, Allenhurst Garage; H. Bickart, Belnord Garage; H. Strasbuger, Lennox Garage; C. S. Bader, Imperial Motor Company; T. P. Radiker, Cedarhurst Motor Livery Company; J. Quinlan, Hudson Garage, and C. A. Singer, Knickerbocker Garage.

LEAGUE TENNIS DATES.

Metropolitan Championships to Begin June 4 and End July 16.

Lawn tennis dates for the Metropolitan League championship schedule were announced yesterday by the committee composed of Otto H. Hinck of the Montclair Athletic Club, Henry C. Martin, Crescent Athletic Club, and Walter L. Pate, Brooklyn Lawn Tennis Club. The twelve clubs that are members of the league are divided into two sections, the matches in both sections beginning Saturday, June 4, and terminating Saturday, July 16. This is a new arrangement, which will bring the championship to a decision at the height of the season.

In notifying the clubs of the match dates Secretary Pate called attention to the rule which makes it necessary for the clubs to nominate players for the championship series on or before May 1. This was done in the series last season to obviate the possibility of the same players being designated by different clubs, as many are members of two or more.

The recently enacted eligibility rule was also sent out with the list. The intent of the rule is to prevent clubs from putting forth special teams of ranking players for the finals in order to clinch the honors.

At the committee meeting yesterday the preliminary arrangements for the annual intercity matches with the selected team representing the Inter-Club Lawn Tennis Association of Philadelphia were made. Secretary John H. Whittaker of Philadelphia was notified that a Saturday in July would be set aside by the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge for the matches in this city, while another Saturday in the same month will be selected for the return match on the turf of the Germantown Field Club, Philadelphia. The Metropolitan League dates follow:

Eight Colleges Vote for Football.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 19.—Representatives of the Universities of Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, and Nebraska, Drake University of Des Moines, Washington University of St. Louis, and Ames, the agricultural school of Iowa, in conference here to-day voted down a resolution to abolish football after December, 1910. All the schools represented at the conference voted against the resolution. What Doctors Say About
ALCOHOLISM

Continual and abnormal indulgence in whisky, beer or wine eats away the stomach lining and creates a morbid craving for a stimulant. No amount of "will power" can restore the tissues burned and seared by alcohol.

Practically all physicians advise medical treatment in cases of chronic Intemperance. Hospitals and sanitariums all over the land treat patients for the disease of Drunkenness, many of them using the Oppenheimer Treatment, recognized as the best and most effective Treatment for Alcoholism.

Write, call or phone for free literature (mailed sealed, in plain envelope) about the Oppenheimer Treatment. Absolute secrecy and privacy are assured.

TRAVIS STANDS OUT IN GOLF HANDICAP

Metropolitan Champion Only Scratch Man in New Rating of Players.

More than five hundred names appear on the new Metropolitan Golf Association handicap list for the ensuing season. The committee, consisting of J. E. Erickson, Chairman; F. J. Phillips, James R. Turner, A. H. Pogson, and Leighton Calkins, had to do some overtime work in order to get the list out prior to the season's first open tournament, which will begin at Lakewood to-morrow.

As in the past, Walter J. Travis, the metropolitan champion, heads the list. He is the only man on scratch this time, while a year ago the Garden City expert had to share the honor with his youthful rival, Jerome D. Travers. Now, the last named is rated at one in the same bracket with Fred Herreshoff. Last year there was no No. 1. Herreshoff and Douglas being Travis's closest companions at two. This year Douglas remains at two, accompanied by Albert Seckel of Princeton, the intercollegiate champion.

Eleven well-known amateurs have been rated at three this year, as against eight last season. Marshall Whitlach, who was included among the 1909 octet, has been dropped entirely, while John M. Ward, at four last year, has moved up a notch. Others in the three bracket are Charles H. Seely, twice metropolitan title holder; Gilman P. Tiffany, five times winner of the Hudson River championship; Archie Graham of Paterson, who has held the New Jersey State title on two occasions; Max Behr, the present New Jersey champion; the far-driving Robert Abbott, George T. Brokaw, Archie Reid, F. R. Upton, Jr., W. Fellowes Morgan, Jr., and Robert C. Watson, who recently won the Aiken tournament for the second year in succession.

The new list contains all those rated up to nine, inclusive, and in the event of a player desiring a rating in an open handicap who is not included all that will be necessary will be for the Secretary of his club to show how he stands, or, rather, how many strokes he receives from some fellow member whose name appears on the list. As more than a hundred entries have been received for the Lakewood tournament this week an early opportunity will be afforded to see how the new handicaps work out. The list up to four, inclusive, is as follows:

Scratch—Walter J. Travis.

Handicap 1—Fred Herreshoff, Jerome D. Travers.

Handicap 2—F. S. Douglas, Albert Seckel.

Handicap 3—Robert Abbott, Max Behr, George T. Brokaw, Archie Graham, W. F. Morgan, Jr., A. M. Reid, C. H. Seely, G. P. Tiffany, F. R. Upton, Jr., John M. Ward, R. C. Watson.

Handicap 4—B. T. Allen, H. E. Armstrong, T. V. Birmingham, C. A. Dunning, H. J. Gee, H. B. Hollands, Jr., A. F. Kammer, Oswald Kirkby, Ellis Knowles, Dwight Partridge, Ralph Peters, Jr., John Reid, Jr., Arden M. Robbins, and C. E. Van Vleck, Jr.

Kramer Wins Five-Mile Cycle Race.

REVERE, Mass., April 19.—The country at large was well represented among the winners at the opening of the bicycle racing season at the Revere track this afternoon. Frank Kramer of East Orange, N. J., the National sprint champion, won the five-mile open race, but only finished third in the half-mile professional handicap. Phil Wright of Salt Lake City won both the quarter-mile open amateur race and the two-mile amateur handicap. The ten mile motor-paced race was won by George Wiley of Syracuse, and Percy Lawrence of San Francisco captured the half mile professional handicap. Edd

WILSON'S SUCCESS A RACING FEATURE

Double for Stable Arouses Applause at the Aqueduct Track.

The fields were light, the track muddy and bad, and the weather dismal and damp at the Aqueduct race course yesterday, and there seemed slight excuse for even the modest patronage that kept as well under cover from the wind as the grand stand inclosure would permit. The gloomy conditions had absolutely no effect on the spirits of the crowd, however, and it was with the enthusiasm of a Summer holiday that the spectators greeted what was in the nature of a double triumph for the Richard T. Wilson, Jr., stable, which won with a horse racing in his own colors, following up a victory by another horse of Mr. Wilson's breeding, racing in another name.

Mr. Wilson's winning race with Onager, one of the Hamburg Place colts he bought from J. E. Madden last Summer, was the first for Mr. Wilson since his return to racing in his own name and his old popular colors.

Mr. Wilson's own winner, Onager, started as the public choice in the fifth event, and with Jockey "Jack" Creevy up, it was an all Wilson outfit that took the track almost immediately after the barrier was lifted and raced in front all the way, winning in easy style by two lengths from R. F. Carman's Carbineer. As breeder Mr. Wilson probably got an equal amount of satisfaction out of the success of Winning Widow, a filly of Mr. Wilson's breeding, by Mexican, though Winning Widow raced in another's colors and earned her prize for the young Kentucky trainer, Kimball Patterson.

The one stake fixture of the card, the Peconic Handicap, at six furlongs, for three-year-olds and upward, brought out a small but select field of sprinters, with R. F. Carman's Magazine and Besom as the public choices in a very open contest. Bar the Western horse Righteasy, every horse in the race had a turn in the lead, Besom won, running away from his field, a length and a half in front of the favorite, Magazine

A distinguished visitor in the clubhouse and an interested spectator of the racing was Señor Alberto Tarazas, nephew of President Diaz of Mexico. Señor Tarazas, who was the moving spirit in the newly formed Mexican Jockey Club, which conducted a successful meeting at the Juarez track, near the Texas border, last Winter, is here to attend an important meeting of turf interests to-day. ROWING AT A STANDSTILL.

Inclement Weather Retards Columbia Oarsmen on Hudson.

Owing to the three days' illness of Miller, an accident to the rigging, and a week of unfavorable weather, the Columbia crew last week made no progress. But this enforced rest for the oarsmen, it is hoped by Coach Rice, will prove beneficial to them and put more ginger into the squad. Now that only three weeks remain before the Annapolis race, the men will be put through a hard workout at high speed each day, and every effort will be put forth by the coach in getting the 'Varsity eight into racing form.

The individual work of the first eight is of a high order, though the rowing of the crew as a unit is still ragged in the sprints. Murphy at stroke has learned Rice's stroke to perfection, and Miller and Dellenbaugh at seven and six, combine well with him to form a strong trio in the stern of the boat. Steinschneider, Clapp, and Hamann in the bow are all rowing in veteran form, and the only places that are of questionable strength are at four and five, where Coach Rice has had to put in two comparatively inexperienced men from his second boat, Culman and Moore. These men rowed in their freshman crew last year, but they are hardly drilled well enough for a 'Varsity eight.

Johnson Too Strong for Ross.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19.—Jim Johnson showed better than Tony Ross in a six-round fight at the Douglas A. C. to-night. There was little cleverness displayed by either men, and it was a slugging match all the way through. The first round was an even break, but Johnson was decidedly the better in the second with the following session, a draw. In the fourth round Ross had the better of the argument for the only time during the bout, for in the two succeeding rounds Johnson landed often and hard and had Ross most of the time on the defensive.

JEFFRIES HAS LIGHT DAY.

Some Road Work and Row on River Constituted His Training.

BEN LOMOND, Cal., April 19.—James J. Jeffries's training camp looked like a rest cure sanitarium to-day. For the first time since he began training Jeffries took almost a complete rest from active work. A stunt on the road in the early morning and a row on the river in the afternoon constituted his day's exercise.

The largest weekday crowd that has visited the camp lounged around the big gymnasium this afternoon waiting to see Jeffries spar, but they were disappointed, for the only glimpse they caught of Jeffries was when he left the cottage for the river.

After his road work Jeffries took a long nap in his open air sleeping room. Shortly before noon he strolled into Manager Berger's office and declared that he was still sleepy.

"If you feel that way about it, why don't you lay off the rest of the day?" said Berger. "I know you need a lot of work and you know it, but you have been crowding too much labor into the time you have been here. If you take my advice, you will stay away from the gymnasium this afternoon."

Jeffries decided to take his manager's advice. The trainers were pleased at the rest plan. They were uneasy over Jeffries's insatiable desire for work.

Billy Papke joined the Jeffries camp to-day to train for his fights with Joe Thomas and Frank Klaus. He brought no sparring partner with him, as he expects to work out with Jeffries's helpers, or even with Jeffries himself. Papke will not start work before Monday.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Jack Johnson has started to pack up preparatory to leaving for his training camp in San Francisco next Thursday. His big touring car, which will be a part of the training camp, will be shipped to-morrow, and the following day his baggage and gymnasium outfit will be sent forward.

PUGILIST FRANK COLE DEAD.

Negro Dies of Fractured Skull Following Blow from Stanley Rodgers.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19.—Frank Cole, a lightweight negro pugilist of this city, died in a hospital to-day from injuries received last night in a boxing bout with Stanley Rodgers at the boxing club managed by "Jack" O'Brien.

Cole was injured in the third round. He received a solar plexus blow which sent him to the mat, his head striking with terrific force. The crowd began cheering at the apparent knockout, but when a physician failed to bring Cole back to consciousness the spectators were dismissed and the fighter was removed to the hospital, where it was found he had sustained a fracture of the skull. He never regained consciousness.

"Jack" O'Brien, Rodgers, Cole's seconds, and George Decker, the referee, appeared before Coroner Ford this afternoon and were held in bail to await the result of an inquest to be held on Saturday. Rodgers's bail was fixed at $1,000, and the others were held in $500 each. O'Brien became bondsman for all involved except himself, a friend going on the fight manager's bond.

Loughrey Defeats Mellody.

BOSTON, April 19.—Young Loughrey of Philadelphia scored a decisive victory over Honey Mellody of Boston at the Armory Athletic Association to-night, having the better of the ten-round bout from the first to the last round. It was a hard fight, however, in which both men took and gave considerable punishment. Loughrey landed much oftener than his opponent, and in the second floored Mellody with a hard left. The third and fourth rounds were slugging matches, in which Loughrey had the better of the argument. During the middle of the fight Mellody seemed to be stronger, but even then Loughrey shaded him. In the seventh round Loughrey handed some heavy blows to his opponent, beating him back against the ropes. From this point on it was all in favor of the Quaker City fighter, Loughrey getting the decision rather easily, despite Mellody's hard slugging.

Roller in Wrestling Form Again.

CHICAGO, April 19.—The Zbyszko and Roller wrestling match, tentatively canceled when Roller wrenched his shoulder during his bout with Mahmout, will be staked here on April 29, as originally scheduled, it was announced to-day. Roller is reported in good form again.

SPORTING NEWS IN BRIEF.

The entertainment and ball of the Irish-American Athletic Club, which is scheduled to take place at Terrace Garden on next Monday evening, is creating considerable interest in athletic circles. Most every athletic organization in the metropolitan district will have a representative present to show their appreciation and good will toward the organization which has done so much for amateur sport in this country in supplying talent to the Olympic teams which have been successful in bringing to America the highest athletic honors in the winning of world's championships.

At the Sharkey Athletic Club to-night Jack Fitzgerald, the Philadelphia middleweight, who recently boxed a draw with Tony Ross, will meet the "Dixie Kid," who holds the title of welterweight champion. They will appear in the wind-up of the entertainment, and are scheduled to go ten rounds. The "Dixie Kid" is one of the cleverest men in the game, and took the welterweight title away from Joe Wolcott. His only defeats in his career have been at the hands of Sam Langford. Fitzgerald has beaten every one whom he has fought of late, and by some it was said he beat Ross.

Among the latest volunteers for the Young Corbett testimonial, to be held at the Fairmont Athletic Club Monday, May 2, are Jim Corbett, Thomas Sharkey, Johnny Coulan, and Warren Barbour, the amateur boxer. Jack Cooper notified the committee yesterday that he would positively appear, and it has been arranged that Corbett and Barbour will give a three-round exhibition as one of the features of that night. Tom Sharkey sent a letter stating that he was glad to do all he could to aid the little fellow.

Manager Cox of the Columbia freshman track team has arranged with the Cornell youngsters for a meet on May 14 at Ithaca.

There is more motor boat enthusiasm this season than in past years, according to the indications at the West Side Young Men's Christian Association, 318 West Fifty-seventh Street, where it has been found necessary to start another class in the Motor Boat School. One group of men has just finished its studies of the marine gas engine, two classes are about half through, and a new class commences this week. The opening of a new class as large as the present one this late in the season is unusual, and shows clearly that the number of men taking up motor boating is continually increasing.

Now that all arrangements have been completed for the Pal Moore-Jimmy Walsh boxing bout at the Empire Athletic Club to-morrow night, the members of the club are busy getting their friends to send in applications for membership. It was announced yesterday that Manager John McGraw and the entire team of the New York Giants had been invited to witness the bout from ringside seats.

Pitcher George Upp of the Columbus American Association nine has been sold to the Williamsport (Penn.) team in the Tri-State League.

Z. Hagerman, a pitcher who joined the Chicago Nationals last season, was sold yesterday to Louisville.

Coq II., owned by Eugene Fischof, won the Prix du Lot, which was run yesterday at St. Ouen, France.

Promoter James Coffroth has matched Billy Papke and Joe Thomas to box twenty-five rounds before his Colma Club, May 14. He has promised the winner a bout with Stanley Ketchel for the championship.

Training quarters have been engaged at Merchantsville, N. J., for Sam Langford in anticipation of his coming fight with Stanley Ketchel at Philadelphia on April 27. Among the sparring partners retained for the work of tuning up the Boston negro middleweight are Al Kubiak and George Cole. Langford professes the fullest confidence in his ability to defeat the champion.

The remaining five events of the ten-event dual meet between the St. George's A. C. and St. Bartholomew's Men's Club will be held to-night at "St. Bart's."

The Combine Athletic Club of Yonkers has scheduled three ten-round bouts for its show to-morrow night. Ed Johnson will fight Al King, Sailor Condon and Jack Swartz will furnish the windup, and Neil Regan and Nathan Ehrlich will go on.

Entries for the Morris Athletic Association's novice road run, which will be held on Sunday, close on Friday, with H. C. Baker, 1,109 Washington Avenue, Bronx; J. Nathan, 417 East 160th Street; also Neva Company, 108 Fulton Street, New York. The run will start at 3 P. M. fro mthe clubhouse.

Invitations have just been sent out for the big field and track meet to be held at Tome on Saturday, May 14. More than 300 schools have been invited. Preliminary acceptances have already been received from almost every school of any athletic importance in the Middle Atlantic States. A 440-yard run has been added to the list of events.

Eugene Bassford, centre fielder of the Hoboken Club, died suddenly at his home Monday evening after a few hours' illness. Bassford was one of the hardest-hitting outfielders in this vicinity, and has been very successful in past seasons coaching the teams of Fordham University, New York University, and the Carlisle Indian School. Funeral services will be held at his home, 1,107 Forest Avenue, between 166th and Home Streets, Bronx, this evening at 8 o'clock.

LOOK FOR ANOTHER QUEENS DISMISSAL

Belief That the Superintendent of Buildings Will Be the Next to Go.

TROUBLE OVER PERMITS

Rumor Current That He Has Used His Office to Promote a Certain Building Device.

The graft exposures that have recently shaken the many little villages of the growing Borough of Queens, and have already cost one department head his place in Borough President Gresser's official family, yesterday struck decisively at another.

Carl Berger, Superintendent of Buildings, is the next man who is expected to join Joseph Nelson of the Sewer Department in retirement to private life. Berger had authority to control the issuance of building permits, while Nelson could control the permits for the buildings, when finished, to be connected with the public sewers.

How Nelson figured in a procedure which diverted large sums from the public treasury has already been told in connection with the charges that resulted in his dismissal from office, and his later offer to tell what he knew in return for a promise of immunity.

The latest charges against Berger, his companion department head in Borough Hall, are that he worked a plan similar to that of Nelson. The only difference was that it was worked through a company in which his brother was a stockholder.

Until the indignation on the part of the taxpayers made the scheme unsafe, a rubber stamp was in use in the office of the Buildings Bureau, and the words on this stamp were simply "Tilly Vent." That was the only way the extensive graft scheme showed above the surface. When stamped across a building permit the words meant that the builder in putting in his plumbing must buy from the Modern Sanitation Company its own particular brand of vent. The thing the builder did not know at first was that the company, which sold him his vent for $3 if it was brass, or $3.25 if it was nickeled, was having the vents made up in Brooklyn at from 64 to 69 cents each, and was paying to its stockholders—nearly all of them Queens politicians—dividends amounting to over 600 per cent. a year.

The Stockholders.

Here is a list of the stockholders as they are on record in the office of the County Clerk of Queens: Louis Berger, Thomas F. Grough, George L. Glaser, Charles A. Tilly, and William H. Tilly, the latter two being plumbers controlling the patent for the device.

Besides these, it is said by a member who was present at the original meeting for incorporation, that ex-Borough President Bermel was a silent partner for over a year, keeping his holdings in the name of his friend Glaser, who is now awaiting trial for the same offenses that resulted in the removal of Bermel from office.

Louis Berger, first President of the company, is the brother of Supt. Carl Berger, who figures prominently in the charges now awaiting action in the office of Gov. Hughes. There it is specified against him that the G. X. Mathews Building Company learned through experience with Carl Berger that it paid to have their plans pass through the hands of brother Louis, if they did not want the Building Superintendent to cause them vexing delays, and that on one set of plans there was attached to the regular bill of $350 an additional item of $180, listed simply as a matter added "by private agreement," this item on investigation turning out to be a "simple hold-up," as alleged in the charges.

The get-rich-quick career of the politicians interested in the company that promoted the enforced sales of the Tilly vent to Queens builders is set forth in a statement filed for investigation with Commissioner of Accounts Fosdick. It was backed by an interview given yesterday by William H. Tilly, who explained the organization of the company and the vicissitudes through which it passed in turning its vents into dividends at the rate of 1,250 per cent. for the twenty-five months in which the company thrived.

Building Supt. Berger, while denying an assertion made by Mr. Tilly that it was he who paid the five-hundred-dollar check which purchased the stock held in the name of his brother, at the same time admitted that the rubber stamp containing the words "Tilly Vent" was in use in his office, and that while it was so used his department considered the "Tilly vent" to be the official vent for use in all Queens building operations.

Complaint Against Gresser.

From April, 1906, when this corporation was formed to exploit Queens builders through the department controlled by Carl Berger, until he succeeded Borough President Bermel in 1908, President Gresser was a member of Bermel's official family, serving then in the Department of Highways. The principal source of complaint against him is that since his election last Fall he has continued to keep in office the same group of men against whose records his election was meant to be a public protest.

Commissioner Fosdick's fourteen accountants, who are rapidly overhauling the records in all departments of the borough government of Queens, will complete their investigation of the Building Superintendent's connection with the Modern Sanitation Company in a few days. Since they have been at work rumors have persistently spread through Queens that President Gresser intends to remove Berger, and that Berger is about to hand in his resignation, but both have entered firm denials.

While developments connected with Glaser, Dermel, Berger, and others were occurring in connection with Commissioner Fosdick's probing, Glaser was at Flushing watching the work of securing a jury to hear the case against John Welz, whose trial is to precede his for activities connected with the Kessina Park scandal.

The Welz jury was not completed at the close of the afternoon session of the Supreme Court, and a special night session was held to fill out the panel.

The perturbed state of public sentiment in Queens was responsible for the slowness with which the work of securing a jury proceeded. It was not until 10 P. M. that the last man was accepted, and the twelve men were marched away for their first night under custody of a court bailiff.

BROOKLYN HORSE SHOW.

William H. Moore's Pair Meats George Watson's in Harness Class.

The eighteenth annual horse show of the Brooklyn Riding and Driving Club, which is always a gala affair of the borough across the river, started last night for a four-day session. The bi gclubhouse in the Prospect Park Plaza was crowded with 1,500 members and friends when the first event, the judging of maiden harness horses, started.

The feature of the evening was the hard-fought-for triumph of William H. Moore's Lady Seaton and Terrington Leah over George Watson Florham Duke and Florham Prince in Class 4, for harness horses. The judges were in doubt until the very last minute, so perfect was the action of each pair. The judges did not mape their decision finally only after each pair had made many extra circuits of the ring, to the great delight of the spectators.

The largest crowd of well-known Brooklyn people who have ever turned out for such an event was present last night despite the bad weather. Every box was taken and occupied at an early hour, and long before the finish of the first event most of the seats in the three tiers were filled.

Prominent among those present were Hamilton H. Salmon, Mrs. A. B. Prentice, Theodore F. Miller, James McLean, Mrs. H. S. Bowen, F. T. Parsons, William N. Dykman, M. L. Schwartz, A. C. WANT A BONDS DIVISION.

Treasury Work Increased by Transfer of Authority Over Securities.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Congress has been asked to authorize the creation of a new division in the Treasury Department to have charge of bonding and contracting matters, the head of which will be a Commissioner whose annual salary will be $4,000 per annum.

Recently by direction of Congress the jurisdiction over the issuance of all bonds was transferred from the Department of Justice to the Treasury, as a result of which work in the latter department has been greatly increased.

Bowlers Make Low Scores.

BALTIMORE, April 19.—Low scores were made in to-day's bowling in the individual and two-man classes at the fourth annual tournament of the National Bowling Association in progress here.

The only man who rolled more than 600 in the individual class was C. Patrick of Yonkers, with 616 to his credit. He was trailed by H. Beechen of Monticello with a score of 580, W. J. Connell of Staten Island with 564, and Frank Winter of Wilmington with 560.

The first team in the two-man contests was nearly 100 points behind yesterday's best two-man score, Wragge and McConnell of New York taking first place in to-day's event with a score of 1,126. Horacek and Horton of Yonkers were second with 1,110, Daye and Winter of Wilmington third with 1,079, and Altmann and Goodale of Monticello fourth with 1,074.

NEW HAVEN SEEKS APPRAISAL.

Asks the Massachusetts Legislature to Recognize Railroad's Value.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 19.—In behalf of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad it is explained that its new petition to the Massachusetts Legislature has two objects, first, the validation of the stock and debt alleged to be illegal under the Massachusetts law, and, secondly, such an official appraisal as will decognize the increase of value of the plant of the corporation as a basis for legal investment by Massachusetts institutions in the securities of the company.

The report of Jan. 20, 1910, of the Massachusetts Railroad Commissioners and Bank and Tax Commissioner recommended that the Massachusetts Legislature should ascertain whether "the outstanding obligations of the New Haven Company are in the aggregate secured by the aggregate corporate assets," and that the company's engineers, accountants, and other experts should supply the necessary data.

This has already been done by the New Haven Company by means of the Stevens valuation, which, as indicated by a recent report of President Mellen, showed a valuation of somewhat more than $600,000,000, as compared with book assets of about one-half the amount.

DIVIDENDS 135 PER CENT.

Central Trust Payments, with New Extra Dividend Added, Amount to That.

The Directors of the Central Trust Company declared yesterday an extra dividend of 9 per cent. on the $3,000,000 capital stock. The regular quarterly dividend has been 9 per cent., so this extra dividend brings the disbursement for the year up to 45 per cent.

Prior to the increase in the Central Trust's stock last year from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000 dividends of 15 per cent. were paid quarterly with extra dividends of 20 per cent., making the trust company's total dividend on its old stock 80 per cent. a year. The capital stock is now three times the amount at which it stood up to last year, all of which increase was made out of earned surplus. The present dividend rate, therefore, is at the rate of 135 per cent. a year on the old capital.

Despite the large dividends which the Central Trust is now paying and has been paying for years, it shows the largest surplus which has been earned by any trust company in New York City. Its surplus and undivided profits, in addition to its $3,000,000 capital stock, amounted on March 25, the date of the last report, to $16,166,229. J. N. Wallace is the President.

KNICKERBOCKER OUT OF DEBT.

Trust Company Being Rehabilitated—Satterlee Retires as Director.

Following the complete rehabilitation of the Knickerbocker Trust Company through the payment in full of all obligations assumed when it reopened after the panic of 1907, Herbert L. Satterlee has resigned as Director.

Mr. Satterlee had been elected as a representative of the depositors after several months of labor as the working head of the Depositors' Committee, which brought about the resumption of the company. He went into the board solely to represent the depositors in the carrying out of the deferred payment plan, and now that this has been accomplished long in advance of the period originally set he has felt free to resign and devote himself to his personal affairs.

Lewis L. Clark, President of the American Exchange National Bank, has succeeded Mr. Satterlee.

Cross and Hyland Return Match.

Leach Cross has one black mark on his record that he wants to offset, though it cannot be entirely obliterated. Dick Hyland beat him in San Francisco in twenty-two rounds, and since then the east side dentist has been anxious to get in a ring again with Hyland. Tom O'Rourke gave him this opportunity when he matched the two fighters for a ten-round bout at the National Sporting Club to-morrow night. The semi-final will be between Eddie Mack and Smiling Kelly, six rounds.

GOLD SHIPMENTS INCREASING.

Total Now Up to $16,000,000 and Outflow May Be Enlarged.

Gold to the amount of $8,930,000 was withdrawn from the sub-Treasury yesterday in the shape of gold coin for shipment abroad, and further engagements of $1,500,000 were announced which may be taken out this morning. Those engagements and withdrawals bring up to $16,000,000 the outflow of gold on the present movement, which began on April 2. Of the gold taken from the sub-Treasury about $3,000,000 was on transactions previously announced and the balance was on new engagements. Kidder, Peabody & Co. took $2,500,000, Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne $500,000, and Heidelbacn, Ickelheimer & Co. $100,000, all for London, and the Bank of New York took $200,000 and the National Bank of Commerce $580,000 for Argentina. In addition to this it was announced that the Bank of New York would probably ship an additional $500,000 to Argentina, and that Crossman & Sielcken would withdraw $1,000,000 today for shipment to Brazil.

This broadening out of the gold export movement to include not only London, but South American countries as well, suggests the possibility that the outflow may assume even larger proportions than has been estimated. Sterling exchange rates rose again yesterday to the highest rate previously quoted during the present gold export movement, and despite the day's large engagements of gold closed firm at 4.8785 for demand sterling.

MacVeagh to Lunch with Bankers.

Gillespie, Chairman of the committee, will preside.

MORE GOLD FOR LONDON

Nearly $4,000,000 Taken for Export Without Affecting Money Market's Course—Wheat Declines Again.

Additional engagements of gold for London and South America, further declines in prices on grain markets, and a rally in cotton from the low figures touched on Monday, under the influence of the Government's action against the so-called "cotton pool," were the features of the Wall Street day. On the Stock Exchange the movement of prices was again controlled by technical considerations; with the single exception of the rise in the traction shares the changes had little or no reference to the day's news. In general stocks sold off rather easily in the morning to prices under the closing levels of the previous night, rallied slowly in the afternoon, and finished the day with fractional advances predominating through the list. Interborough-Metropolitan issues were directly influenced by the very favorable nine months' earnings statement of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, although it is, of course, understood that the substantially larger surplus secured by that company simply buttresses the dividends which in turn care for the interest on Inter-Met. bonds. Although the copper shares failed to reflect this, presumably because the story was later denied, nevertheless if the report that the Copper Producers' Association is to abandon its publication of the monthly statistics of the trade should prove true the move must injure the entire industry in the eyes of the public. There are many reasons why the publication of these figures should be continued and not one good one for their abandonment. The lower tendency of the wheat markets is distinctly interesting; in the first place it serves to refute current reports of damage to the crops from snowfall and cold weather in the West, and, again, such declines bring wheat nearer the level at which exports must be encouraged. The Government's recent report on supplies in farmers' hands proved that an exportable surplus exists.

In spite of the very heavy takings of gold for shipment during the day exchange moved up again to the previous highest point of the season, and there is, therefore, every sign of further exports, although since the present movement started on April 1, some $17,000,000 gold has gone out. Local money market conditions continue easy in spite of the drain. Continued receipts on a large scale from the interior provide an offset, and at the moment the local banks are gaining substantially from the Government on routine transactions, having received on balance from that source nearly $2,000,000 since Friday last.

THE CHICAGO STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Small holders of Street's Stable Car Line stock, whose faith had been revived by the recent announcement of a change in the management of the company, received a rude shock to-day, when the shares were hammered down 4 points. The break was brought about by insiders who were short and sought to cover advantageously by forcing timid investors to part with their stock on the slump. Other local issues were quiet and presented no features of interest.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Those Copper Figures.

Stocks of copper companies were not at all influenced by the intimation that the Producers' Association had under consideration the abandonment of the policy of publishing monthly reports on production, deliveries, exports, and supplies on hand. As a general argument against the continuance of the reports members of the association say that the figures afford too much ammunition for speculation in Wall Street. Specifically, they say that a showing of 100,000,000 pounds of copper on hand convinces everybody but the well informed that the market is oversupplied and on the verge of demoralization, although this is by no means the case. If such misinterpretation of the figures has really been going on it speaks volumes for the self-restraint of the copper interests that they have not profited in a stock market way. The curious feature of the situation is that throughout the year or more during which the figures have been published the general opinion of their meaning has been consistently confirmed by the price of copper metal.

Influence on Copper Merger.

Whatever the real reason for the suspension of the publication of the copper figures might be, a decision to omit them would mark a step in retreat from the publicity which is everywhere coming to be recognized as beneficial to a properly conducted business. Certain members of the association, in defense of the step, assert that other industries make no such reports, but this is incorrect. One of the most trustworthy barometers of business conditions is found in the statistics provided monthly by the ironmakers of the country, and from their output a fair estimate of steel production may be formed. The proposed great "copper merger" will not be helped by the lapse of the copper trade into its former secretive ways.

The Coming Steel Dividend.

One of the favorite subjects of speculation in brokerage offices at the moment is the coming Steel dividend. Opinion seems to be divided on the question of an increase in the rate, and no help to a conclusion has been found in the decision of the corporation to advance wages. One school of thinkers on the dividend argues that the wage increase was a necessary preliminary to a dividend advance, while another and equally numerous class of philosophers urges that the advance in wages entirely precludes a higher dividend. Nobody, at the moment, at least, seems to consider the apparently fundamental question of the position of the steel trade as a factor in the decision.

Street's Holdings of Steel.

Publication of the list of important holders of Steel shares promptly elicited the comment that too great an amount of the stock is held "in the Street." This is, of course, only another way of saying that current speculation in Steel is out of proportion to the activity in other directions. The opinion to this effect is based entirely on the great amount of Steel stock standing in the names of brokerage houses, but it requires only a moment's consideration to show how false may be the conclusion drawn from such holdings. Day in and day out people buy securities in Wall Street, pay for them, and never take the trouble to have the certificates transferred to their own names. There are many reasons for this course of action, one of them being that many people of means have accounts with banking and brokerage houses and simplify the collection of dividends by leaving this work to the houses in question, which receive the usual distributions and credit them to their clients' accounts.

New Wabash Terminal Committee.

Pittsburg holders of Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal bonds, it became known yesterday, have organized a committee to represent the bondholders, thus bringing another protective committee for these bonds into the field. A committee headed by J. N. Wallace has represented the first mortgage bondholders ever since the property was put into receivership two years ago, and there is also a committee of the second mortgage bondholders. The Pittsburg committee takes the position, it is said, that the bondholders' interest have not been cared for with sufficient energy. They are said to feel, for one thing, that the Wabash Railroad should be held to responsibility under the traffic agreement entered into between the Wabash and the Wheeling & Lake Erie and the Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal. The receivers when they took charge abrogated this traffic contract, but their right to do so has been questioned by the Mercantile Trust Company, as trustee for bonds of the Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal, and this question is still in litigation. Coincidently with the formation of this Pittsburg committee it appears that another plan, recently worked out for the reorganization of the Wabash Pittsburg Terminal, has been abandoned. A similar fate met several plans previously devised.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

At the West Side Young Men's Christian Association, 315 West Fifty-seventh Street, tonight Edward L. Suffern of Suffern & Son will speak on "The Accountant as Financial Adviser" and Thomas B. Paton, general counsel of the American Bankers' Association, on "Bills of Lading."

The remaining $1,040,000 notes will be paid off. The lien on the collateral now securing the notes will continue unimpaired, and in addition the notes will be secured by $5,000,000 Wabash Railroad Company first refunding and extensions mortgage 4 per cent. gold bonds. Holders are notified that they will receive face value and the May 1 coupon on transfer delivery May 1 to the bankers.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Happenings of a Day in London, Paris, and Berlin.

LONDON, April 19.—Money was in good demand to-day. Discount rates were easy on the announcement of the gold engagements at New York for shipment here.

The stock market opened weak, with general losses on realizations, due partly to anticipation that the passing of the budget and the collection of the income tax would cause stringency in the money market. All sections, from consols to oil shares, suffered; but when the offerings were absorbed in the afternoon a slight hardening occurred, and the markets closed steadier.

American securities opened easy. During the early trading the low-priced issues hardened, but the gold exports from New York and fears of a poor quarterly statement of the United States Steel Corporation checked the advance. Irregular price changes followed until the afternoon, when New York bought well and caused a recovery, in which United States Steel, Union Pacific, and Missouri, Kansas & Texas shares were prominent. The closing was steadier.

Bullion amounting to £852,000 (including £830,000 in American eagles) was taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: At Madrid, 6.6; at Lisbon, 11.

Bar silver steady at 24 9-16d per ounce. Money, 2½@3½ per cent.; rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 3⅝ per cent.; for three months' bills, 3 3-16 per cent.

PARIS, April 19.—Prices were irregular on the Bourse to-day.

Exchange on London, 25f 24c for checks.

BERLIN, April 19.—Trading was quiet on the Boerse to-day. Following a weak opening, prices strengthened, and closed better.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 49½ pfennigs for checks.

Money, 3 per cent.

Private discount rate, 3⅛ per cent.

THE COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Grain Active and Lower—Provisions Steady—Cotton Dull, Awaiting Government Action.

The Liverpool market was unexpectedly strong and a drive was made at the short interest at the opening, resulting in a quick advance in prices. Shorts were good buyers and prices were up 1 to 2¼d from the low of Monday. The advance was short lived, with evidence of heavy liquidation. It seems probable that longs took advantage of the rise to sell out and lighten their loads. The crop news was favorable. The reports from the West are that there has been no damage from the recent low temperatures and that the crop is progressing steadily. The Western advices also were of increased offerings of cash wheat from the country, and Nebraska has been selling quite freely the past few days. The day's statistics were bearish. Bradstreet's visible showed an increase of 176,000 bushels in the United States, against 2,795,000 bushels decrease a year ago, and the world's visible increase 1,251,000 bushels, against a decrease a year ago of 7,535,000 bushels, while the present world's visible is 151,246,000 bushels, against 127,277,000 bushels a year ago. The afternoon market showed evidence of a good deal of selling pressure, and the tone was rather unsettled and irregular late. Cash wheat quoted No. 2 red Winter 114 nominal c. i. f.; No. 2 red Winter spot nominal 115½ f. o. b. afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth opening 116 nominal; No. 2 hard Winter nominal; No. 1 Northern Manitoba May 110½.

Corn was fairly active and lower. There seemed to be a good deal of pressure, due partly to the weakness in wheat, but there was apprehension regarding the keeping quality of corn. Early there were about 69,000 bushels of corn posted here as out of condition, and apprehension was expressed in the West regarding the condition of the large amounts of corn in store at different points of accumulation. Later about 12,000 bushels more were posted. Later the market was rather unsettled. Cash corn quoted No. 2 nominal, No. 4 and steamer nominal, all elevator, export basis.

Oats were fairly active and weaker. Prices were influenced by the decline in wheat and corn and by the favorable crop and weather reports. The advices from the Northwest indicate that there is very rapid advancement in Spring seeding. The Bradstreet's visible decreased 409,000 bushels, and there was a decrease of 913,000 bushels in corn. Oats quoted natural white, 45½@48; white clipped, 46½@52.

Provisions were fairly active and prices were somewhat higher. The Western receipts of hogs were small for the day and this apparently started an active covering of shorts, and there was a good advance in values.

COTTON.

The trade in cotton was quite active early, after which prices became firmer, and fluctuations were narrow. The early market was lower on outside liquidation, as a result of the reports of the Government investigation, and there was considerable selling by professionals with the idea that the investigations would bring some liquidation of the large interests. The amount of cotton for sale on the decline was small, and when sellers tried to cover there was a quick advance in the market, and cotton became very difficult to buy. Orders were hard to execute in the May and July. New crop deliveries were more freely traded in, and outside interest is rapidly leaving the manipulated deliveries for the new crop. The weather news was favorable. The weekly Government weather bulletin showed general rains during the week, with precipitation excessive in some sections. Otherwise it was considered a favorable report. Trade accounts were without essential change. Business is slow generally, and demand for goods is of unsatisfactory volume. The trade is waiting for the results of the Government investigation, and the reports from the court were discussed with much more interest than the other news regarding the market.

Southern spot unchanged to 1-16c decline.

COFFEE.

Coffee was dull and featureless, with total sales of only 3,500 bags. Prices were unchanged to 5 points lower, and the market was extremely narrow and easily influenced by comparatively small operations either way. The French market was ¼ franc higher, and Hamburg was unchanged to ¼ pfennig decline, while in Brazil Rio was 100 reis decline and Santos was 50 reis lower. The visible supply of Brazilian coffee in and afloat for the United States was 3,224,851 bags, compared with 3,733,515 last year, and 3,627,353 two years ago. The scarcity of low-grade Santos is given as a reason for the poor demand, as buyers refuse to take the higher grades, and are holding out as far as possible for new-crop coffee. Spot coffee, steady, at 8½c for Rio No. 7.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Big Acreage Deal on Line of New Railroad—Bowery Hotel Sold to Investor—Deals in the Loft Zone—Bronx and Suburban Sales.

The Archer property, including a tract of twenty-three acres situated at the Chester Heights Station of the New York, Westchester & Boston Railroad, now under construction to connect the upper portion of the Bronx with the lower mid-centre section of Westchester County from Mount Vernon to White Plains, has been sold by the Thomas L. Reynolds Company for Roland B. Archer to Rose S. Hamill and Anthony McOwen. The property contains the old Archer residence and several other buildings, and is well situated in the Mount Vernon district. The consideration, it was learned, was about $100,000. It is interesting to note, as indicating the residential development possibilities in the region to be directly served by the railroad, that the new owners were offered a profit of $12,000 soon after the purchase. The property will be cut up into building lots in the immediate future and developed as a high-class residential community.

Buys Liberty Street Parcel.

George N. Robinson of the firm of James Begge & Co., owners and occupants of 109 Liberty Street, has acquired the adjoining five-story building at 107, together with a small strip which fronts 5 feet 8½ inches on Liberty Street and extends 117.5 feet along Church Street, tapering down to the smallest fraction of an inch.

Mr. Robinson purchased the property through the Fernando W. Benner Company and intends to improve the strip and the lower part of the building just sold for store purposes, similar to the improvement of the Anoka Realty Company on the opposite northeast corner of Church, formerly the Second Precinct Police Station.

At the northern end of the strip purchased by Mr. Robinson is a freak lot, which measures 15 by 6 feet. This is owned by ex-Representative Jefferson N. Levy, who is holding the lot at a value of $25,000.

Bowery Hotel Sold to Investor.

D. & W. Mullins have sold for the Mandel Realty Company to Alice Flynn 197 Bowery, a six-story fireproof hotel, covering a lot 25 by 150 feet. The premises are leased to one tenant for ten years at an aggregate net rental of $100,000.

Crist & Herrick and the O. E. Larson Company have sold for the heirs of William Livingston, deceased, the property known as 86 Christopher Street, a three-story building, on a lot 21 by 67.11 by irregular.

Carl and George Jacobs have sold to William and Mollie Botzemaier 521 Second Avenue, a four-story dwelling, with store.

M. Denbosky has sold through M. Salmanowitsh 173 East Broadway, a five-story building, on lot 26 by 100.

Deal on West 16th Street.

H. E. O'Reilly has purchased 48 West Sixteenth Street, a four-story dwelling, 25 by 92. This property, together with three abutting parcels on the south side of Seventeenth Street, was sold recently by the Astor estate. Mr. O'Reilly owns the adjoining dwelling, 45 and 47 West Sixteenth Street, and now controls a plot 63 by 92.

W. H. Dolson & Co. have sold for A. W. Hoyt 333 Riverside Drive, a five-story American basement dwelling, on lot 22.11 by 100.

Lawrence Estate Sells Corner.

The Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company has sold for the estate of Frances Adelaide Lawrence the southeast corner of Avenue A and Twenty-third Street, a five-story tenement, on lot 24.9 by 75. The buyer is the Brower estate, which owns the rest of the block front on the east side of Avenue A, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third Streets.

The estate has also sold through the same firm 128 West Twenty-sixth Street, a five-story tenement, on lot 25 by 100, to Aaron Coleman.

Actors' Society Sells House.

J. B. English has sold for the Actors' Society of America the four-story clubhouse 133 West Forty-fifth Street, on lot 20 by 100, to a client of I. H. Kramer's office.

Investor Buys Quadruple Apartment.

M. Edgar Fitzgibbon has sold for Dr. Simon Strauss to Prof. Charles G. Herberman of the New York City College 714 and 716 Amsterdam Avenue, a five-story quadruple apartment with two stores on plot 40 by 100.

The property was held at $85,000, and a price close to that amount was obtained.

W. S. Baker, in conjunction with E. Z. C. Pescia, has sold for the Realty Transfer Company to a client 1,941 and 1,943 First Avenue, a six-story tenement, with stores. This property has been held at $52,000.

Florence Estell and Martha Craig have sold to Alice Jackson 63 East Fifty-second Street, a three-story dwelling, on lot 13.7 by 98.9.

Improvement Co. Buys Dwelling.

Jonathan Bennett, Frederick V. Pitney, and Alexander Wilson, as executors of Susan Wright, have sold to the New York and Westchester Improvement Company 225 and 227 West Sixtieth Street, two four-story buildings, on plot 50 by 100.5.

GOVERNMENT BLOW AT OPTION TRADING

AWAITED CHANCE TO STRIKE

Cotton Bulls Say the Bears Instigated Action of Attorney General—Brokers Before the Federal Grand Jury.

A TIMES reporter learned yesterday from an official source that the Government's investigation of the so-called cotton pool in which four or more large cotton speculators are alleged to have cornered the cotton market for May deliveries through an arrangement entered into with many of the large mills in the South, is the first move of the Federal authorities toward ending all dealing in futures on commodities directly related to the cost of living. At the same time the Federal Grand Jury here began the inquiry into the alleged cotton pool to see if indictments can be found for violation of the Sherman act which prohibits combinations in restraint of trade.

Attorney General Wickersham is said to have adopted the present course in lieu of the "anti-option" legislation which has so often been proposed of late, but which has met with powerful opposition. Mr. Wickersham and his advisers are said to have been waiting several months for a chance to strike this blow.

High Prices Due to Manipulation.

The investigation, begun many weeks ago by the Department of Agriculture into the increased cost of living, is believed to have a direct bearing upon the present Federal inquiry into the cotton pool as one of the causes of soaring prices, which the department investigators found was the fictitious values placed on commodities by the manipulation of market speculators. The Federal investigation of the so-called butter trust in Elgin, Ill., is also said to be another attack on the line of action the Attorney General has planned as a result of the disclosures of the Department of Agriculture.

Four of the fourteen men who were served with subpoenas to appear as witnesses before the Federal Grand Jury were examined yesterday. They are supposed to have been asked about an alleged agreement entered into two months ago by members of the cotton pool and certain mill owners in the South. These witnesses were George W. Neville, of Stephen M. Weld & Co.; Norrie Sellar, of Dick Brothers & Co.; Evans R. Dick of the same firm, and J. Temple Gwathmay, of George H. McFadden & Brother. They are cotton brokers and are generally credited with being "bears" in the present cotton market.

In the subpoenas served on the brokers they were directed to produce all records or papers in their possession which might bear on an agreement made Feb. 28, 1910, by the pool calling for the purchase of 150,000 bales of cotton for delivery in the months from March to July, 1910, at certain prices and under certain conditions named in the agreement. Whether copies of such an agreement or any papers bearing on such an agreement were produced has not been learned. The utmost secrecy is being observed by the Federal investigators. Clark M. McKercher, Assistant to the Attorney General, is carrying on this part of the investigation.

Ten More Brokers Answer Subpoenas

The Grand Jury adjourned until to-morrow, and Mr. McKercher left for Washington, presumably to confer with Mr. Wickersham and acquaint him with the facts gleaned from the witnesses yesterday. While the Grand Jury was in session ten other brokers and cotton dealers were in the anteroom ready to appear should they be called.

Those who will appear when the inquiry is resumed later in the week are William P. Jenks of the cotton brokerage firm of Craig & Jenks, Nathaniel L. Carpenter of Carpenter, Baggot & Co.; John H. McFadden of McFadden & Brother, Charles T. Revere, William D. Martin of Springs & Co., Eli B. Springs of Springs & Co., Edward Moyse of Moyse & Co., Richard A. Springs of Springs & Co., David H. Miller, and William R. Craig of Craig & Jenks.

Many other cotton brokers are expected to be called before the iquiry comes to an end. It was current rumor around the Federal Building during the afternoon, as well as in the cotton district, that several cotton mill men of note will also be summoned.

As for the two men who have been named by the Government as being members of the pool, they are not being allowed to take any part in the inquiry. They are Frank P. Hayne and William P. Brown of New Orleans and this city.

Although no other names have been disclosed, it is generally understood that Eugene P. Scales of Texas and James A. Patten of Chicago and an unidentified "Mr. Rothschild" have been named as parties to the agreement of Feb. 26 by informants of the Government.

Leads to the Investigation.

The identity of the persons who originally laid the facts before the Federal investigators is a question which caused a lot of conjecture yesterday on the floor of the Cotton Exchange. The prevailing impression seemed to be that some of the bears who have sold cotton short for future delivery, and found themselves unable to buy without losing heavily, had appealed to the Government.

It looked on Monday as though the market were facing a fast break when the news of the coming investigation got noised about, for cotton dropped $1 a bale for May deliveries. But yesterday May cotton recovered 60 cents a bale, and there was jubilation among the bulls.

Another theory advanced was that the Northern spinners, some of whom have been obliged to close down because of the high prices for cotton during the next few months, were the instigators of the Federal inquiry. This telegram was sent to Carpenter, Baggot & Co. yesterday to their firms and correspondents in this country and abroad:

"Federal Grand Jury in New York investigating alleged corner in May cotton, thought instituted by unfortunate bears and spinners. No corner contemplated, but delivery expected. Government intervention invoked to create doubt, disgust, and help to depress price of South's greatest commodity, two-thirds of which is used abroad. Think investigation shows weakness of bears and proves bull card.

Say They Bought for Delivery.

Those mentioned as members of the pool deny that they have been speculating in cotton futures alone. They say they have been purchasing the cotton outright.

"Does this investigation mean that a man has got the right to sell all the cotton he wants when he can't own a bale of cotton, but that nobody can buy cotton or pay for it?" said Sterrett Tate, the cotton expert for Carpenter, Baggot & Co.

"No one here quite understands the basis for the Government inquiry," said a representative of Hubbard Brothers & Co. "If spinners can unite on a movement for shore time to close their mills to lower the price of cotton, and farmers can unite and resolve not to sell cotton except at a certain price, why should merchants be refused the right to hold their property for any price they see fit?"

Hayden, Stone & Co. had this to say: "It is almost inconceivable that this Federal suit should have been started by any Exchange member of any standing or foresightedness. It will probably be the opening wedge for another investigation that may have serious results. The Government will have to find a new basis for its complaint."

Fuller E. Calloway, President of the Manchester Cotton Mills and an officer in several other large mills in Georgia, sent his agents here this dispatch yesterday:

It occurs to me that Attorney General Wickersham was unwittingly inspired by bears, who have sold what they do not own, depressing the cotton market at the expense of the farmers, and demoralizing the market for cotton goods. The bears hope by this attack to scare the mills out of this legitimate trade, and to further demoralize the cotton and cotton goods market. In my opinion this attack will prove a boomerang for the bears, and ...

trays the predicament they are in through having sold something they did not own.

More Raps at the Bears.

Frank P. Hayne said yesterday that he had received this telegram from a friend in Rome, Ga.:

"Are all the bears so scared that they have to call for the policeman?"

Another telegram from Newberry, S. C., advised Mr. Hayne and his associates to stand firm; that the cotton growers were with him. The Board of Trade of Tomson, Ga., wired him:

"Have wired Georgia Congressmen our protest against Wickersham's action."

A persistent rumor in the financial district yesterday was that Dick Brothers & Co. had something to do with the Government's inquiry. This was flatly denied yesterday by a member of the firm.

William P. Brown, a member of the so-called pool, said yesterday that he had nothing to fear from the investigation. He said:

"Mr. Hayne and myself are cotton merchants and have simply bought controls on the New York Cotton Exchange as other members and merchants have, and if we choose to receive the cotton and sell it to the trade it is in line with our rights. If we continue to do this kind of business it is certainly more legitimate that the business of the rank New York speculator, who simply buys the controls and sells them out, in which case no actual cotton changes hands."

Mr. Brown was asked if the pool really existed. He said:

"I do not know that any pool exists. People have the right to buy jointly within the limits of the rules of the Exchange and the laws of the country. There is no keeping of cotton aside. The Government has no right to interfere with business of this kind. It has been suggested that the spinners are the instigators of this Government investigation. This is not true. The spinners realize that the cotton crop is short. It is to their interest to see cotton high, because they have goods on hand which they wish to sell at good prices."

President Brennecke of the New York Cotton Exchange said no investigation of the pool had as yet been ordered by the Board of Governors, but that should the Government inquiry disclose anything wrong in the dealing of any Exchange member an inquiry would be demanded.

DENIES QUARANTINE CHARGES.

Dr. Doty's Investigation Refutes Complaints Made to Gov. Hughes.

Dr. Alvah H. Doty, Health Officer of the Port, said yesterday in reply to the charges made by Charles Dushkind to Gov. Hughes against the ill-treatment of immigrants on Hoffman and Swinburne Islands, that the charges were not justified by his own investigations. After an examination of the head nurse of Hoffman Island and other attendants at his office at Tompkinsville, S. I., yesterday, Dr. Doty said:

"I am making a complete investigation into these charges, and shall send my report to Gov. Hughes in a few days. The attendants at the hospitals I have had before me to-day do not remember the names of the men and women who are said to have received ill-usage in these institutions.

"Is it not strange that not a single complaint was made to me? I never heard of this until these charges came to me from the Governor. Here is a sample of them: I received a letter from a man stating that his wife had been compelled to work from 5 o'clock in the morning until 11 at night in the hospital. He said she had written him to that effect, but the woman denied having written any such letter. I am on the island every day, and it would be strange if I should fail to learn something of the conduct of the guards and nurses if the charges had been true."

There are now on Hoffman Island eighty patients, and forty on Swinburne Island. To attend to these 120 patients Dr. Doty said that there are twenty-six nurses and four physicians, including himself.

The accusations made by Charles Dushkind include starvation, insults to women, attacks on girls, the beating of a sick baby that died afterward, and forcing a sick woman to work many hours a day.

Mr. Dushkind said yesterday that he would not take any further action until Dr. Doty had filed an answer to the charges with the Governor.

MAY VOTE ON SUFFRAGE.

Senate Likely to Have a Test of Strength to Please Women.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The Senate probably will have an opportunity at the present session to place itself on record on woman suffrage. Practically such assurance was given by Senator Clay of Georgia, Chairman of the Committee on Woman Suffrage, to more than 200 women to-day at the conclusion of their hearing on the resolution offered by Senator Borah of Idaho to abolish sex distinction in the Constitution.

Senator Clay said he would endeavor to have the committee act on the matter one way or the other, so that the proposition could be put up to the Senate. This was all the women asked for at this time. Mrs. Rachel Foster Avery of Pennsylvania, who made a stirring address before the committee, declared that the women would prefer favorable action, but rather than no action they wanted even an unfavorable report, so that the matter might be presented to the Senate, where, she asserted, there was positive assurance that it would receive some support. She asserted also that there were members of the House who stood ready to vote for woman suffrage. The Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw made a similar plea.

These appeals made an impression upon the committee, and Senator Clay made his promise. This evidently satisfied the women, for they left greatly pleased.

A hearing was also had by the suffragists before the House Committee on the Judiciary at which a report was also urged.

MRS. GRAVES LEFT $6,491,790.

Her Second Husband Receives More Than a Million from the Estate.

Mrs. Margaret J. P. Graves, widow of James S. Plant, founder of the Plant Line of steamships, a Southern railroad magnate, and owner of a chain of hotels in Florida, left an estate valued at $6,491,790, according to an appraisal filed yesterday in the Transfer Tax Office.

Mrs. Graves married Robert Graves a year prior to her death. Under her will he received $1,000,000 in cash and an interest in her residuary estate which amounts to $1,057,450. Similar interests were bequeathed to Michael Francis Loughman and Joseph Loughman, nephews of Mrs. Graves.

The estate consisted of $5,941,700 in personal property, principally stocks and bonds in railroad companies, and the remainer, $550,000, in real estate. Her home at 7 West Fifty-first Street was appraised at $225,000. The plot in Fifth Avenue, between Sixty-ninth and Seventieth Streets, on which Mrs. Graves proposed to erect a new house, was appraised at $525,000.

INVITES INQUIRY INTO KLOPSCH FUNDS

Christian Herald Manager Says It Has No Objection to Any Responsible Investigation.

SORRY TO REPLY TO ATTACK

But There Is Nothing to Conceal, He Declares—How Funds Sent for Charity Were Accounted For.

Otto Koenig, general manager of The Christian Herald, of which the late Dr. Louis Klopsch was the editor, made a statement yesterday in answer to many inquiries regarding the attitude of the paper toward published intimation that a public accounting of the $3,000,000 or more charity collections of Dr. Klopsch was desirable.

"The Christian Herald," said Mr. Koenig, "has no objection whatever to an investigation by any responsible organization of the manner in which the funds for philanthropy raised in the lifetime of Dr. Louis Klopsch were expended." He added that he spoke for The Herald and for Mrs. Klopsch, who inherited the property from her husband.

When inquiries were made, Mr. Koenig was disinclined at first to discuss the matter.

"I would rather not dignify the attacks to the extent of making any statement," he said, "but would let the people consider their sources. There is, however, absolutely nothing to conceal."

"Would you object to an inspection of The Herald's books on the various funds raised by Dr. Klopsch by a credited representative of the State Board of Charities?" he was asked.

Open to Inspection and Welcome.

"Certainly not," was the prompt reply. "Why should we? I should feel very badly if there were any such objection. Our books are open to such inspection, and welcome."

Mr. Koenig explained that all the charity funds were acknowledged in The Herald as received, with the total amount received up to that date. When any particular fund was closed, a statement, audited by a public accountant, and sworn to before a notary, giving total receipts, remittances, and expenses was published. This, he said, was done in case of the Italian earthquake fund and all others. There were regular reports for the Bowery Mission and Children's Home.

Mr. Koenig said that The Herald's attitude toward the Hoey bill, providing for inspection of all charity funds contributed by the public, whether in taxes or not, was friendly. If the bill became a law such inspection as it provided would be welcomed. On no account whatever would it be opposed.

The Hoey bill, or one similar to it, was suggested by the last annual report of the State Board of Charities to the Governor.

A Sample Accounting.

Here is a sample of the way in which, on the closing of a fund, an accounting was made by Dr. Klopsch in his favor. The fund in the case was the Italian earthquake fund, for which contributions were made from Dec. 29, 1908, onward. In The Christian Herald of June 9 is the following year this financial statement was published, with the annexed sworn statement of the public accountant who had examined it:

CZAR HONORS C. M. DALLY.

Armor Plate Man Receives a Diamond Cigarette Case from His Majesty.

Charles M. Dally, a war material inventor and dealer, at 29 Broadway, visited Russia four years ago to arrange for the adoption of the Harvey armor plate in the Russian War Department. In the course of his relations with the Russian War Department his work was called to the attention of the Czar.

Mr. Dally knew this, but on returning to this country thought that there would be nothing more to the incident. He was accordingly considerably surprised last week to receive a letter from Col. A. de Bode, military attaché of the Imperial Russian Embassy in Washington, D. C. The letter informed Mr. Dally that the Czar had remembered his Russian visit so pleasantly and was so pleased with the armor plate which Mr. Dally had caused to be adopted in Russia that he was sending Mr. Dally a gold and diamond cigarette case as a token of his personal esteem.

In sending the cigarette case to this country, the Czar directed Mr. de Bode to present it to Mr. Dally. The cigarette case reached Washington a few days ago, and Mr. Bode, who was sailing for Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, yesterday brought it to Hoboken with him. Mr. Dally went over and received it before the vessel sailed.

Coming from the Czar, the cigarette case, Mr. Dally knew, was sure to be beautiful. But when he took the wrappings from it he found that it was far beyond his expectations. It was of solid gold. The imperial eagle, with which it was decorated, was set in diamonds.

Mr. Dally is Secretary of the Churchward International Steel Company, President of the Moore Silencer and Trigger Controller Companies, and is an officer of several other companies having to do with military and naval affairs. He received unusual honors from the British Government for procuring the adoption of the Yankee (Lee) military magazine rifle in the War Department of that country several years ago.

DEFENDS VIVISECTION.

Dr. Flexner, Opposing Inquiry, Tells of Results Accomplished by It.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 19.—Associations opposed to cruelty in animal experimentation argued before the Senate Finance Committee to-day in favor of the Bayne-Goodspeed bill providing for an official investigation of vivisection as practiced in this State. Senator Bayne said that reports of irresponsible experiments and allegations of unnecessary cruelty justified a thorough inquiry by the State.

Mrs. William Van Namee, Secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Abuse in Animal Experiments, said the society was not opposed to vivisection, but to experiments made by medical students in imitation of experts, which, she said, often resulted in unnecessary cruelty. Dr. Simon Flexner, Director of the Rockefeller Institute, gave illustrations of the value to the medical world of animal experimentation. Vivisection, he said, had resulted in the discovery of a treatment for infantile paralysis, which claimed 2,500 victims in New York City and the Hudson Valley in two years.

"For every monkey used in the experiments which led to the discovery of a cure for cerebro-spinal meningitis," Dr. Flexner said, "a score of lives has been saved already in this State, and scores of hundreds will be saved in the future."

Those besides Dr. Flexner who opposed the bill was Prof. Frederick S. Lee of Columbia University and Dr. W. B. Cannon of the Harvard Medical School. Dr. Lee said the medical profession opposed an inquiry because they regarded the plan as another scheme adopted by the anti-vivisectionists for continuing their agitation.

PERSONAL TAX OPPOSED.

Metz and Lawson Purdy Say It Can't Be Collected.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 19.—Ex-Controller Herman A. Metz and Lawson Purdy, President of the New York Tax Board, at a hearing to-day before the Assembly Committee on Taxation, gave reasons for their belief that the personal tax is not enforceable and should be abolished.

"I always have felt that a personal tax is a farce and not collectible," Mr. Metz said. "There are $14,000,000 assets on New York City's books that cannot be collected. The tax is estimated ahead of its collection, and it falls short of the amount estimated. If you can get a commission that can make men honest it is well to talk of devising laws for the collection of the tax."

Mr. Purdy said that only 18 per cent. of the tax was collected in 1907, the same proportion in 1908, and a little more in 1909.

ASK PARDON FOR WALSH.

Petition Signed by 22,000 Indianians Presented to the President.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Representative Cullop of Indiana to-day presented to President Taft a petition for the pardon of John R. Walsh, the Chicago banker. It was signed by 22,000 residents of the Second Indiana Congressional District, into which the railroads built by Mr. Walsh extend.

The President directed that the document be referred to the Department of Justice to follow the usual course. He was informed that other petitions probably would augment the one from Indiana.

Mark Twain a Little Weaker.

REDDING, Conn., April 19.—Samuel L. Clemens, (Mark Twain,) who is here trying to regain his health after the severe attack of heart trouble that prostrated him on the voyage from Bermuda to New York last week, is a little weaker. Dr. Robert Halsey of New York issued a statement to-night as follows:

"Mr. Clemens is very comfortable to-night and passed a quiet day, though he seems to have grown a little weaker." Dr. Halsey will remain with Mr. Clemens.

WOLTER DEFENSE NAGS PROSECUTOR

Accused Man's Counsel Objects to Nearly All Questions as to Ruth Wheeler's Murder.

HER MOTHER A WITNESS

Tenants of the House Where the Prisoner Lived Tell of Finding the Body.

Assistant District Attorney Moss made the opening speech yesterday afternoon for the prosecution in the trial of Albert Walter Wolter for the murder of Ruth Wheeler before Judge Foster in General Sessions, and then called Mrs. Wheeler to testify to the disappearance of her daughter, and other witnesses to tell of the finding of a body at the rear of 224 East Seventy-fifth Street. He did not get the opportunity to open his case till after the luncheon recess, as the entire morning was taken up with the completion of the jury.

Mr. Moss is finding a certain amount of difficulty in reconciling the logical with the legal order of evidence. He has not yet attempted to prove that a murder was committed, or that the body discovered was that of Ruth Wheeler. He began with the departure of Ruth Wheeler from her home on the morning of March 24, and the fact that her mother had never seen her again after calling her back to get the umbrella, which has been identified as the one later found in Wolter's apartment.

Wallace D. Scott, chief counsel for the defense, took every advantage of this order of evidence and kept interposing objections on the ground that it was irrelevant, incompetent, and in no way connected with the indictment. Judge Foster overruled him, but declared that all the testimony and the exhibits, which include the umbrella, the hair of the murdered girl, the bag in which the body was found, and certain photographs discovered in Wolter's room should be stricken later from the record if the prosecution failed to connect them with the case.

Who the Jurors Are.

Six jurors had to be selected yesterday, as Joseph Feldman, the seventh man placed in the box on Monday, was excused by mutual consent. Here is the final list:

1.—Foreman, WILLIAM V. KULP of 327 West 124th Street, structural engineer.
2.—CHARLES K. HARRIS of 196 Riverside Drive, music writer and publisher and author of "After the Ball."
3.—FRANCIS HAGER of 481 East 140th Street, manufacturing jeweler.
4.—HENRY T. VAN PELT of 372 Convent Avenue, a manager for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.
5.—WILLIAM G. CAMPBELL of 216 West 111th Street, dealer in electrical supplies.
6.—FREDERICK R. FORTMEYER of the Alpine apartment house, 55 West Thirty-third Street, Assistant Treasuer of the National Lead Company.
7.—FRANK B. PAULSON, 402 West 153d Street, insurance clerk.
8.—CLAYTON G. CLAYTON, 535 West 151st Street, circulation manager for Current Literature.
9.—CHARLES H. NICHOLS, 62 West 127th Street, consulting engineer.
10.—FRANK H. GOULD, dealer in musical instruments, 550 Riverside Drive.
12.—GIRARD F. MUELLER, 2,640 Eighth Avenue, a cloth broker.

In court were several women who will be called to testify. Among them, besides Mrs. Wheeler, the mother, were Adelaide and Pearl Wheeler, sisters of Ruth, dressed in deep mourning, and Mrs. Wenzel Klinger and Mrs. Francis Ringels, who had apartments in the house where Wolter lived. Their admission to the courtroom fired the anxiety of the morbidly curious, many of whom were women, to get in, too, but the police were firm and none but those who could show that they had business in connection with the trial were admitted.

Mr. Moss in his address to the jury declared that he was laying before them evidence of a cold-blooded murder, in excuse for which no extenuating circumstances could be advanced, but he admitted that his case would rely entirely on circumstantial evidence.

"Ruth Wheeler," he said, "a maiden, 15 years of age, was studying stenography. She answered a reply to an advertisement, asking the applicant for work to call at 224 East Seventy-fifth Street. This card was signed with a rubber stamp and the name Wolter. On March 24 she left her home to apply for the work and never came back.

Search for the Girl.

"Her elder sister went to look for her. She found her way to the flat on the top floor back of 224 East Seventy-fifth Street, and was admitted by one Kate Muller, who locked the door behind her. The woman was scantily dressed and the defendant was in bed. Pearl Wheeler searched the premises and called her sister's name.

"We shall show that Wolter, as he lay in bed, grossly insulted her. She endeavored to get out, but was only able to do so when she said that she had a policeman in the hall. About 10:30 that night she came back with her brother and a policeman. They accused Wolter of abduction, but he denied all knowledge of the girl, and they went away.

"Next day Wolter moved to a house in East 105th Street, taking a room under the name of Muller. Developments induced the police to arrest him."

Ruth Ames Wheeler, age 15; lives with parents; Merchants and Bankers' School.

Mr. Moss went on to detail how the tenants of the next apartment to Wolter's in Seventy-fifth Street on Saturday afternoon threw from the fire-escape a bag which had been left there on Thursday night. With the bag was a rolled-up shirt. Taggart, the tenant, called the attention of Mohl, the janitor, to these articles, and when the latter refused to investigate did so himself.

"The bag," said Mr. Moss, "contained the burned body of a young woman. The shirt, which belonged to Wolter, bore the initial 'W.' The body was identified at the station house as being that of Ruth Wheeler."

The prosecutor then described how Wolter on the Thursday night had painted the fireplace in his apartment and tried to cover it up, and how the police found in the ashes a day or two later bones, teeth, and articles which are supposed to have belonged to Ruth Wheeler.

"We shall show," said Mr. Moss, "that Ruth Wheeler was not only strangled and burned, but that other injuries were inflicted upon her. We shall prove that Albert Wolter killed her."

The first two witnesses called by the prosecution were Walter H. Volckening, an architect of 116 Decatur Street, Brooklyn, who identified a drawing he had made of 224 East Seventy-fifth Street, and Harold L. Cole, a photographer, who took photographs of the fireplace, bedroom, and rear room, where Wolter lived.

Mrs. Wheeler, mother of the murdered girl, was then called. She identified some photographs of her daughter, and in spite of the vigorous objections of Mr. Scott she also identified the umbrella, a string of beads, and other articles found in Wolter's rooms as having belonged to her daughter.

Mrs. Wheeler was excused without cross-examination and John Taggart, a waiter living at 222 East Seventy-fifth Street, was called. He told how his wife called his attention to a sack and a light-colored bundle on the fire escape on Saturday, March 26, and how he had thrown them into the yard. He identified a burlap bag as the covering of the package he had thus disposed of. It was in this that the body was found. His wife also was called to give corroboratory testimony.

Other witnesses were Mrs. Frances Ringels and John Mohl, janitor of the house where Wolter lived.

The trial will continue at 10:30 this morning. Mr. Moss said it would probably take two days more.
